Christopher Hermann, APRN, BC, Detroit, MI
Christopher Hermann is an Advanced Practice Registered Nurse at the John D. Dingall VA Medical Center. Mr. Hermann is considered an expert in Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease, asthma and sleep dysfunction. Patients and staff find him to be extremely competent, going the extra mile to assist patients with special needs. He has been a significant contributor in the area of respiratory therapy and was the first nurse practitioner in the medical center to obtain in-house privileges. Mr. Hermann is a member of the Nursing Research Committee and has recently submitted a research project for approval from Wayne State University Human Investigation. Many of his previous research projects resulted in publication. Mr. Hermann's list of professional organization is lengthy and includes the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners, American Nurses Association, Michigan Nurses Association, American Heart Association, and the Michigan Council of Nurse Practitioners where he is president-elect. In this role Mr. Hermann will be extremely influential in molding the role of nurse practitioners for the State of Michigan. Mr. Hermann is an exceptional role model and representative for nursing.

James Horstmyer, RN, Wilmington, DE
Jim recently completed the Master's Degree program for Nurse Practitioner, and is an active member of his local chapter of Sigma Theta Tau. He has recently expanded his role of preop testing for vascular surgery to include patients referred from Lebanon, PA. This role requires he collaborate with physicians, anesthesia, nurses and support services to prepare a patient for surgery. He designed a standardized practice for surgical patients who were using blood thinners such as coumadin, plavix of NSAIDS. He also researched herbal medications and their possibly adverse affect on clotting, blood pressure and anesthesia. Patients are now aware of the need to discuss these medications with their providers. Jim's interactions with the many agencies he uses in his community health role reflects positively not only on himself, but also the hospital.

Patricia Johnson, LPN, HBPC, Buffalo, NY
Ms. Johnson has been an LPN in the home care setting for 12 years. She continuously demonstrates excellence in the nursing care she provides to the veteran patient and family. She reports her observations, and ensures action is taken to address her concerns. She is zealous in her concerns for patients. She is self-directed in identifying her learning needs, and attends inservices which are pertinent to her position. Ms. Johnson is recognized by co-workers for excellence in the provision of care. Her calm nature and excellent listening skills are recognized by all.

Shirley Cline, PCA, Bronx, NY
Ms. Cline's delivery practices consistently exceed expectation by an exceptional degree. She assesses practice and offers suggestions for improvement. One improvement is the Nursing Assistant's End of Shift Report – this improved productivity and morale among the NAs. In collaboration, she created a template to facilitate focused documentation of care for NAs. It is now being used across the Medical Center. Her observational skills are outstanding. She has gained the respect of her peers, such that one noted "I want to be like Ms. Cline in a few years". She is a role model and admired by all.

Frankie Manning, RN, Nurse Executive, Seattle, WA
Ms. Manning has consistently fostered the growth and development of nursing staff and clinical programs, provided the vision and driving force in developing new programs, and actively participates in the leadership of the Medical Center. Some of the nursing initiatives she has created are: the Same Day Unit, Outreach Health Screening Program, Continuous Care Clinic, a restraint free environment, and a Woman Veteran's Coordinator. She created the Adopt-A-Student program in collaboration with local community colleges. She has created several outreach programs with the schools of nursing, as well as international colleagues. Ms. Manning is a role model for all staff holding clinical faculty appointments, as she has three appointments herself. She is an asset to the Veteran's Healthcare System and deserving of the Secretary's Award for Excellence in Nursing as the Nurse Executive.

Linda F. Watson, RN, Director, Central Alabama (Tuskogee, AL)
Ms. Watson's leadership and support have fostered an environment in which Advance Practice Nurses are vital partners in the provision of high quality patient care in virtually every section of the large health care system. She was the driving force behind the development, implementation and evaluation of a strong program of Nursing Care Management for high-risk populations. Under Ms. Watson's leadership, a nurse-managed patient safety program has transformed the health care system into a benchmark facility. She remains in constant contact with the needs of nurses and other clinicians through a highly visible management style and dialogue with staff and patients. The most recent Nursing Home Satisfaction Survey revealed that the percentage of patients who trusted their nursing staff was in the high 90s. This recognition is only possible with the continued and ongoing support of this outstanding director.

April 25, 2003

MEMORANDUM TO: Misty Marshall
Presidential Messages

FROM: Bonnie Carroll
Deputy White House Liaison

SUBJ: Presidential Message Request

Traditionally, a Presidential letter is prepared for the recipients of the Secretary's Award for Excellence in Nursing. This award honors Nursing Service personnel actively engaged in the care of veteran patients at Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) health care facilities.

Secretary Principi is requesting a Presidential Message for the following Department of Veterans Affairs employees: Christopher Hermann, APN, James J. Horstmyer, RN, Patricia Johnson, LPN, and Shirley Cline, NA.

Additionally, Ms. Linda Watson, Director, Central Alabama Health Care System, has been selected to receive the Secretary's Award for the Advancement of Nursing Programs for 2003. This award recognizes a medical center director who has achieved distinction in VA's nursing program thereby enhancing the VA's quality of patient care.

We would also like to honor Frankie T. Manning, RN, as the recipient of the new Nurse Executive category in the Secretary's Award for the Advancement of Nursing Programs.

Attached for your use is proposed draft letters as well as additional background information. The VA is planning a ceremony in their honor on Monday, May 5, at 2:00 p.m. Secretary Principi will present these letters with their awards. Once the letters have been signed, please call me so that we may arrange for pick up, if possible, no later than Friday, May 2. I know the employees will cherish a letter from the President.

If you have any questions, please call me at (202) 273-4838.

Christopher Hermann is an Advanced Practice Registered Nurse at the John D. Dingall VA Medical Center. Mr. Hermann is considered an expert in Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease, asthma and sleep dysfunction. Patients and staff find him to be extremely competent, going the extra mile to assist patients with special needs. He has been a significant contributor in the area of respiratory therapy and was the first nurse practitioner in the medical center to obtain in-house privileges. Mr. Hermann is a member of the Nursing Research Committee and has recently submitted a research project for approval from Wayne State University Human Investigation. Many of his previous research projects resulted in publication. Mr. Hermann's list of professional organization is lengthy and includes the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners, American Nurses Association, Michigan Nurses Association, American Heart Association, and the Michigan Council of Nurse Practitioners where he is president-elect. In this role Mr. Hermann will be extremely influential in molding the role of nurse practitioners for the State of Michigan. Mr. Hermann is an exceptional role model and representative for nursing.

James Horstmyer, RN, Wilmington, DE
Jim recently completed the Master's Degree program for Nurse Practitioner, and is an active member of his local chapter of Sigma Theta Tau. He has recently expanded his role of preop testing for vascular surgery to include patients referred from Lebanon, PA. This role requires he collaborate with physicians, anesthesia, nurses and support services to prepare a patient for surgery. He designed a standardized practice for surgical patients who were using blood thinners such as coumadin, plavix of NSAIDS. He also researched herbal medications and their possibly adverse affect on clotting, blood pressure and anesthesia. Patients are now aware of the need to discuss these medications with their providers. Jim's interactions with the many agencies he uses in his community health role reflects positively not only on himself, but also the hospital.

Patricia Johnson, LPN, HBPC, Buffalo, NY
Ms. Johnson has been an LPN in the home care setting for 12 years. She continuously demonstrates excellence in the nursing care she provides to the veteran patient and family. She reports her observations, and ensures action is taken to address her concerns. She is zealous in her concerns for patients. She is self-directed in identifying her learning needs, and attends inservices which are pertinent to her position. Ms. Johnson is recognized by co-workers for excellence in the provision of care. Her calm nature and excellent listening skills are recognized by all.

Shirley Cline, PCA, Bronx, NY
Ms. Cline's delivery practices consistently exceed expectation by an exceptional degree. She assesses practice and offers suggestions for improvement. One improvement is the Nursing Assistant's End of Shift Report – this improved productivity and morale among the NAs. In collaboration, she created a template to facilitate focused documentation of care for NAs. It is now being used across the Medical Center. Her observational skills are outstanding. She has gained the respect of her peers, such that one noted "I want to be like Ms. Cline in a few years". She is a role model and admired by all.

Frankie Manning, RN, Nurse Executive, Seattle, WA
Ms. Manning has consistently fostered the growth and development of nursing staff and clinical programs, provided the vision and driving force in developing new programs, and actively participates in the leadership of the Medical Center. Some of the nursing initiatives she has created are: the Same Day Unit, Outreach Health Screening Program, Continuous Care Clinic, a restraint free environment, and a Woman Veteran's Coordinator. She created the Adopt-A-Student program in collaboration with local community colleges. She has created several outreach programs with the schools of nursing, as well as international colleagues. Ms. Manning is a role model for all staff holding clinical faculty appointments, as she has three appointments herself. She is an asset to the Veteran's Healthcare System and deserving of the Secretary's Award for Excellence in Nursing as the Nurse Executive.

Linda F. Watson, RN, Director, Central Alabama (Tuskogee, AL)
Ms. Watson's leadership and support have fostered an environment in which Advance Practice Nurses are vital partners in the provision of high quality patient care in virtually every section of the large health care system. She was the driving force behind the development, implementation and evaluation of a strong program of Nursing Care Management for high-risk populations. Under Ms. Watson's leadership, a nurse-managed patient safety program has transformed the health care system into a benchmark facility. She remains in constant contact with the needs of nurses and other clinicians through a highly visible management style and dialogue with staff and patients. The most recent Nursing Home Satisfaction Survey revealed that the percentage of patients who trusted their nursing staff was in the high 90s. This recognition is only possible with the continued and ongoing support of this outstanding director.

Memorandum

Department of Veterans Affairs

Date: January 5, 2003

From: ACNS/Primary Care & Research

Subj: Secretary's Award for Nurse Excellence

To: Dingell VAMC Secretary Award Committee

1. This memo is to submit Mr. Christopher Hermann, APRN, BC (Advance Practice RN, Board Certified) as a nominee for the Secretary's Award for Nurse Excellence. Mr. Hermann is an exceptional adult nurse practitioner who serves primarily in the pulmonary outpatient area. He meets the criteria as follows:

Demonstrates effective, quality nursing practice in a positive manner within the health care system. Mr. Hermann maintains the highest standards of practice in his own practice. He is considered an expert in the field of COPD, asthma and sleep dysfunction and is often sought for expert guidance. Patients and staff find him to be extremely competent and he always goes the extra mile to assist patients with their specific needs. He identifies system problems encountered in his practice and works diligently for a win-win solution. He has been a significant contributor in the area of respiratory therapy, smoking cessation, asthma and COPD. Mr. Hermann was the first nurse practitioner at this facility to obtain in-house privileges, rounds with the pulmonologists, works with residents, fellows and staff in providing care for admitted patients. He has assumed the role of coordinator for the medical bronchoscopy team, providing conscious sedation for those patients in addition to his many other roles.

Establishes and maintains an educational plan to support professional career development with demonstrated innovative outcomes in nursing practice. Each semester Mr. Hermann is requested by local universities to precept their nurse practitioner students (namely, Wayne State University and University of Michigan). He is an excellent educator resource and role model for students, as well as, staff. He does frequent staff presentations on topics such as, "Asthma Update" and " Current Practice Guidelines for the Assessment and Treatment of COPD". He also presents patients who have a great teaching potential to fellow nurse practitioners, interns, residents and medical staff. Mr. Hermann has completed application for adjunct faculty for Wayne State University.

Collaborates effectively with other health care colleagues. Mr. Hermann's role requires that he collaborate with a number of other health care colleagues, both professional and non-professional and he does this with ease. He works well with medical staff (residents, fellows and medical staff) on a daily basis; must interact well with staff nurses in his outpatient/inpatient role; collaborates with respiratory therapy and medical staff in the regular performance of coordinator of medical bronchoscopies; collaborates with social work, prosthetics, physical and home health nursing in the area of home oxygen requirements and has revised many of these processes in order to decrease patient-stress and concern. He is currently collaborating with these disciplines in the development of a pulmonary rehabilitation program. He is an active member of the Dingell VA Nurse Council, which regulates practice; an active member of the Nurse Practitioner Council, regulating nurse practitioner practice at this facility; and generally serves in any role that he is requested from nursing/hospital administration. Additionally, he is well known at local universities and works well with professors and students to achieve their educational goals during clinical rotations.

Demonstrates effective use of research to impact health care outcomes. Mr. Hermann is a member of the Nursing Research Committee and has recently submitted a research project for approval from Wayne State University Human Investigation, to assess quality of life for lung cancer patients under care at the Dingell VAMC. Results of this study are expected to improve quality of life for these patients (who often have dismal results of both surgical and medical treatment options) in the area of pain control and improvement in functional status. Other research that he has participated in include, "Social and Economic Variables as Indicators of Illiteracy in Health Care", resulting in the following publication:

Artinian, N.T., Lange, M.P., Templin, T.N., Stallwood, L.G & Hermann, C.E. (2001) "Functional Health Literacy Among Veterans in an Urban Primary Care Clinic". Veterans Health System Journal (in press).

Another research project where he participated as a graduate assistant, was called, "Parternership for Cultural Competency: Enhancing Health Service Quality and Access with the Arab Community" resulting in the following publication:

"Diversified Nursing Practice in Ambulatory Care", Nursing Economics, May-June 1993, 11(3), 176-179.

Mr. Hermann is currently participating in the organization of an active research program to include monthly research flyers to staff nurses describing nursing research results and methods to apply them to their practice.

Demonstrates integrity and adherence to the profession's code of ethics. Mr. Hermann can always be relied to hold the highest ethical standards for his practice and for those with whom he works closely. Placing the patient as first priority and respect for the patient's autonomy keeps Mr. Hermann focused. Adhering to a principle that 'an informed patient will be a more compliant patient' is one that is paramount in his practice. Mr. Hermann's integrity is above reproach and he is always found "doing the right thing" even if it is not the most popular route.

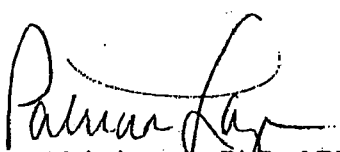
Develops strategies including appropriate actions to improve organizational performance related to resource utilization. All VA facilities have been faced with the challenge of "doing more without a dramatic increase in staff" relative to increasing enrollments, priority of service-connected veterans, backlog of patients, etc. With this as a 'backdrop', Mr. Hermann has been an active participant in volunteering to organize and participate in the weekend primary care clinics in an effort to reduce the backlog of patients and to allow service-connected veterans to be cared for in a timely manner. His participation and contribution have been enormous in this area and the outcomes are demonstrable in our statistics. Because there is a paucity of case management for outpatients at this facility, Mr. Hermann has submitted a white paper to leadership outlining a plan for, either extension of current case managers' roles to the outpatient arena, or expansion of the prevention nurses' role to include case management of the most difficult-to-manage patients. Examples would include patients with travel difficulties (coordinating appointments), assistance with non-adherent diabetic patients (with frequent telephone calls to assess home management), patients with frequent admissions/exacerbations of COPD (visits and telephone calls to assess home management), hypertensive patients whose blood pressures have not reached goal (home monitoring, assessing blood pressure diaries, collaboration with provider for medication adjustments), smoking cessation and other management problems as the needs arise.

Promotes the image of nursing and the nursing profession within the community. Mr. Hermann has served in the community on a Speakers Bureau in the area of asthma, COPD and rhinitis; serves as a current clinical preceptor for nurse practitioner students for WSU and University of Michigan; serves as instructor for Associates in Medical Education to teach ACLS (Advanced Cardiac Life Support) for southeast Michigan; taught "'Testicular Cancer and Self Exam" to a group of high school students in Redford, Michigan and taught several other topics to local high school and elementary students, including "Summer Safety", " Boy to Man" and "Infection Control in School"; taught "Risk Reduction in Heart Disease" to a group of senior citizens in Dearborn, Michigan and several other retirement villages; taught "Smoking Cessation Counseling in an Office Setting" in Grand Rapids, Michigan; served on the Michigan League for Nurses Speakers Bureau; presented "Dynamic Strategies for Recruitment & Retention" at a Michigan League for Nursing Annual Conference and other local presentations. He has presented nationally in June, 2002, "Global Initiative for Chronic Obstructive Lung Disease: Applying the Gold Standards to your Practice" at the annual conference of the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners (AANP) in Reno, Nevada. His abstract: "Assessment of Sleeping Disorders in Acute and Primary Care Settings" has been accepted for presentation at this year's AANP's annual conference in Annaheim, California and the Second Annual Advanced Practice Conference, sponsored by the Michigan Council of Nurse Practitioners in Dearborn, Michigan this March. Mr. Hermann's list of professional organizations is lengthy and includes the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners, American Nurses Association, Michigan Nurses Association, American Heart Association and the Michigan Council of Nurse Practitioners where he is the president-elect. In this role, he will be extremely influential in molding the role of nurse practitioners for the state of Michigan, working closely with both nurse practitioners and state legislators to enhance the status of this important health care professional. Mr. Hermann is an exceptional role model and represents nursing and this VA facility in an outstanding way within the community and beyond.

2. I highly recommend this outstanding John D. Dingell VA staff nurse practitioner to you for this prestigious award.



M. Patricia Lange, PHD, APRN, BC

JAMES HORSTMYER, RN, STAFF NURSE
VAM&ROC, Wilmington, DE

Demonstrates effective, quality nursing practice in a positive manner within the health care system.

Mr. Horstmyer works in the dual role of staff nurse in Pre-Op Testing and Community Health. He is self-directed and these roles afford him the opportunity to function most of the time independently.

In the past year, there have been modifications in the responsibilities that Jim assumes. The patient population in preop testing has changed in the past year. Since vascular surgery has now broadened its practice to include the Lebanon VAMC patients, Jim has assumed the role of contact person with these patients' case manager. This is necessary so that the Lebanon patients receive the same quality of care afforded to "our" patients. This required that Jim modify and change the routine preop work up that we normally provide. He has created a grid to track the progress of the Lebanon patients allowing our preop testing staff to view testing that has been completed and testing that still needs to be done. It also identifies tests or procedures that may have been missed or overlooked that can be ordered by the surgeon prior to the patients' arrival. The results of his efforts are promising; the Lebanon patients are extremely satisfied with the care they have received which stems back to their initial encounter in preop testing with Mr. Horstmyer. In his role in community health, Jim is now an active participant in the interdisciplinary discharge rounds. Here he can share his expertise on the guidelines and available home care services to improve the discharge planning and decrease the patients' length of stay. Mr. Horstmyer intervenes and serve as the patients' advocate when unrealistic expectations are requested for a patient to receive at home, preventing the patient from being discharged before they are ready and avoiding costly re-admissions. Other nurses, physicians, social workers and therapists seek Jim out as a resource in community health.

Establishes and maintains an educational plan to support professional career development with demonstrated innovative outcomes in nursing practice.

Jim recently completed the Master's Degree program for Nurse Practitioner at Wilmington College. Completion of the adult nurse practitioner program has prepared him to assume a nurse practitioner position in this facility. He has attended numerous nurse practitioner related seminars and professional meetings to prepare him for his future role. He is and active member of his the local chapter, Delta Tau, of Sigma Theta Tau. Jim willingly assists in the education of nursing students rotating through his assigned area.

Collaborates effectively with other health care colleagues.

Jim and a colleague are currently involved in attempting to obtain a contract with a home IV infusion company. He has recognized the importance of this need and is in contact with several companies that provide this service. Jim's role in preop testing requires he collaborate with physicians, anesthesia, nurses and support services to prepare a patient for surgery. An example of this collaboration is the interaction he has with these previously mentioned staff when preparing a patient for surgery with multi-system failure. He discusses issues that could arise and jeopardize the goal for a positive surgical outcome. On more then one occasion he has discovered that the patient has a cardiac history that the patient failed to mention to his surgeon. This evaluation may result in the patient needing a stress test and perhaps his surgery postponed until all of the tests are completed and reviewed.

In the CHNC setting, Mr. Horstmyer collaborates with physicians, nurses, social workers, secretaries, dietician, physical therapist, occupational therapist, and psychiatrist to ensure that the patient receives the needed care at home. Recently a patient in the community was having a problem maintaining cleanliness of his home, which could have been a fire hazard for home oxygen. Jim's expertise was sought by a center leader to assist with this problem. Through collaboration with the oxygen supply company, the subcontracted home respiratory therapist, a visiting agency, a county social worker and the local public health office a positive outcome was achieved. By Jim's efforts to contact and collaborate with all of these different resources the patient's home was renovated to make it safer and have his home oxygen therapy continue. As a result of this positive outcome, the community health nurse coordinators are now a part of the Respiratory Care Committee to provide input regarding home oxygen issues.

This same collaboration is required when community nursing home inspections are completed. The inspection team discusses issues that may need to be addressed prior to agreeing to contract with a specific nursing home. Interaction with the nursing home administrative staff is needed to ensure that they are aware of our expectations for our veteran guests.

Demonstrates effective use of research to impact health care outcomes.

In pre-op testing, research is an integral part of the ongoing processes to better meet the needs of changing patient population; adjust to changes in technology and new medications. An example of Jim's research is when he designed a standardized practice for surgical patients who were using blood thinners such as coumadin, plavix or NSAIDS. Jim researched the literature and sought input from the primary care physicians, anesthesiologist, surgeons and radiologist to facilitate this change. Another example was when in conjunction with the rheumatologist he was able to meet the needs of our arthritis patients by allowing them to continue their medications when scheduled for surgery. This information was shared with the surgeons who agreed with Jim's findings.

Mr. Horstmyer and his other RN team member did an informal research project to identify the number of inappropriate visiting nurse consults generated, which were about 30%. A formal meeting was held with the social workers, case manager and physical therapist to explain the criteria needing to be met before a referral was initiated. This initiative has resulted in a decrease of inappropriate consults and more timely referrals.

Jim's research of herbal medications has resulted in a change in preop patient preparation. A list of herbal medications that may have adverse effect on clotting, blood pressure and anesthesia are now included as part of the preop workup. This result is improved patient awareness of not only the known benefits of herbal medicines but also the possible complications of such medications. The patients are now aware of the need to discuss herbal medications with their providers resulting in positive surgical outcomes for our patients.

Demonstrates integrity and adherence to the profession's code of ethics.

Jim recently consulted the ethics committee with a dilemma. The VA is paying for a 24-hour live-in caregiver so that the patient may continue with hospice care. However, the hospital is threatening to remove the 24-hour caregiver if the patient does not comply with his medical treatment. If he complies with the medical treatment, he will no longer be in compliance with the hospice guidelines and their services will be terminated. The decision from the Ethics committee is that the patient can come to our Nursing Home Care Unit for his remaining days after his assets are depleted in his home setting.

In the CHNC setting Jim is faced with many ethical dilemmas, mostly relating to patient discharges. Instead of telling patients that all of their home care services once discharged will be adequate, Jim gives them the information they need so the patient can realistically assess if they can function at home or need to seek further assistance such as nursing home placement.

As one of the community health nurse coordinators, he no longer has to seek prior approval for home health aid services from the Chief of Medicine or the Chief of Staff. As a result the emphasis is placed on him to analyze financial resources when providing care for the veterans. Over the past year he has assisted in informal research to determine the most cost effective, high quality home care services in the surrounding area, specific to home health aid services. The reason for finding these available resources was due to a growing shortage of home health aid services for our veterans in need if these services. The community health care coordinators have compiled a list of the most affordable, high quality agencies for those veterans who need this care. This information is routinely shared with our patient and their families. Jim's efforts have not only resulted in satisfied patients, receiving quality care, at an affordable rate but have expanded the available agencies to which our patients can be referred. He also lobbied to have patients needing home health aids to be referred to unlicensed agencies after the guidelines were reviewed. If Jim had not pursued this change, there would not be the abundant resources currently available.

Promotes the image of nursing and the nursing profession within the community.

Jim's interactions with the many agencies he utilities in his community health role reflects positively not only on himself but also this hospital. He is a positive role model who interacts in a professional manner at all times. When involved in nursing home inspections he presents a positive image worthy of respect.

Dear Karl;

Just returned from a trip to Asia.

I believe that Snow is doing the right thing in pressing our Asian friends to allow their currencies to appreciate somewhat. In years past I used to have to deal with this problem as Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, and it is never easy. You have to be prepared to use real leverage--such as the Senators' threats of tariffs-- or you get nothing except expensive raw fish for your efforts in Japan, and a visit to the Great Wall in China.

I didn't get your phone message of last week until I returned to the office yesterday. Obviously, I'm at your disposal. My cell telephone is PRA 6

Thanks for all you are doing for the country and this President.

Best Wishes,

Richard McCormack

To Fran Mainella:

Today we talked about the acquisition by the National Park Service of the 6, 600 acres of (ranch) land adjoining the Elkhorn Ranch Unit of Theodore Roosevelt National Park in North Dakota. The acquisition of this land was endorsed at the Annual Meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Theodore Roosevelt Association, October 10, 2002.

I am sending you by mail a copy of the full resolution.

Among other subjects, we briefly discussed possible multiple uses of the land in question. The clause in the above resolution on the matter is:
" Be it further resolved, that multiple uses of the land, specifically for hunting, cattle grazing, camping, or educational programs, may be permissible in the future under proper regulations; however, the Theodore Roosevelt Association strongly recommends that to preserve the natural landscape, there be no further surface interruptions."

We have kept in close touch on conditions in North Dakota, and I think I can fairly say that our resolution of last October (which I'll mail to you) represents informed judgment.

In looking at the situation, it might be possible to cooperate in some way with the State of North Dakota on this land. Perhaps the land could be owned by the federal government and managed by the state park system, thereby saving the NPS some labor costs.

BACKGROUND ON SPIRIT OF SERVICE AWARD AND RECIPIENTS

SPIRIT OF SERVICE AWARD

Each year, The American Legion recognizes outstanding young men and women from every branch of the armed forces for not only their commitment to America by serving in the military, but also for their outstanding volunteerism in their communities during off-duty hours.

Criteria for American Legion Spirit of Service Award:

- Must be enlisted E-1 through E-5.
- Must be an outstanding military professional.
- Must be a committed volunteer in programs that benefit the communities in which they live.

Each military department selects one winner from service-wide nominations. This is the 4th year that The American Legion has recognized these outstanding Americans, representative of thousands of committed soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coastguardsmen around the world.

2003 SPIRIT OF SERVICE AWARD RECIPIENTS

SERGEANT JACOB WITTE - UNITED STATES ARMY RECIPIENT

The 2003 Spirit of Service Award for the United States Army was presented to a member of the 769th Engineer Battalion (Combat)(Heavy) of Baton Rouge, Louisiana - Sergeant Jacob Witte (Witty).

His Commanding Officer says he has an "infectious enthusiasm toward helping others.

He has volunteered with Special Olympics in Louisiana the past three years. He is a volunteer with the Southern University Law Center. He is a mentor for young men at Baton Rouge Youth, an organization for 'at-risk' kids.

He is also involved with the East Baton Rouge Parish Operation Sunshine bringing a message of hope to kindergarten children.

Finally, even in uniform his volunteer spirit is obvious. During an extended deployment to Afghanistan in support of Operation Enduring Freedom he volunteered to work with the Polish Engineers in mine clearing - even though he had never been trained as a sapper. He became a battalion expert.

PETTY OFFICER ALYSHA HARAN – UNITED STATES NAVY RECIPIENT

The 2003 Spirit of Service Award for the United States Navy was presented to Cryptologic Collection Technician 3rd Class Alysha D. Haran worked in the film industry before joining the Navy after the September 11 attacks on America. She is a native of San Rafael, California.

Throughout her adult life, her sense of service has extended beyond the fulfillment of her normal duties. Throughout high school she tutored English to immigrants and young mothers earning high school diplomas and GEDs. In 1999, she traveled to Nicaragua to help with the Hurricane Mitch Relief Program.

Petty Officer Haran now helps veterans by selling Poppies for the veterans Association in Yountville, CA. She spends many hours at veterans and nursing homes visiting veterans. On top of that she has volunteered at the USO, preparing care packages for troops overseas and particiapated in a weekend program reading and serving as a role model to 4th and 5th graders.

Currently, Petty Officer Haran volunteers every Saturday at the U.S. Navy Memorial and Naval Heritage Center in Washington D.C., educating tourists about our Navy.

SERGEANT JOSEPH SHAMAY – UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RECIPIENT

The 2003 Spirit of Service award for the United States Marine Corps was presented to Sergeant Joseph Shamay, Jr., of Cherry Point, North Carolina.

He gives his time to Special Olympic Chapters in New Bern and Havelock, North Carolina. In Havelock he coordinated a bowling league for these special children. This motivated volunteer also spearheaded an effort that raised more than $4,200 for the American Cancer Society in the 2002 "Relay for Life."

And, in a little publicized activity he has helped to place over 550 pets into temporary care for deploying service members as part of the Semper Fido program. His efforts include working with local merchants for donations of food and pet supplies for the adopted animals.

PETTY OFFICER RICK CARROLL – UNITED STATES COAST GUARD RECIPIENT

The 2003 Spirit of Service Award for the United States Coast Guard was presented to Information Systems Technician Second Class, Rick Carroll.

In less than 18-months this outstanding Petty Officer stationed in Miami Beach gave his off-duty time to work with Habitat for Humanity, the Coast Guard Mentor-In-School Program, the Miami-Dade Country Public Schools and the Riverside Baptist Church.

His mentorship in various school and church environments encompasses assisting in kindergarten class to working with 9th grade students. Because of his efforts with one particular student her skills improved and she vowed to stay in school, graduate and attend college.

For his church he is busy mentoring 15 to 19-year olds and gets his hands dirty helping construct staging for the Christmas Pageant.

Finally, he even took leave so he could chaperon a week-long retreat at the West Palm Beach University for the Youth Department of his church.

SERGEANT DANIEL SHIPLEY – UNITED STATES AIR FORCE RECIPIENT

The 2003 Spirit of Service Award for the United States Air Force was presented to Technical Sergeant Daniel Shipley.

During his time at Yokota Air Base, Japan, Technical Sergeant Daniel Shipley was consistently involved in volunteer efforts that make a difference.

He was the representative from Yokota for the "Love Saves the Planet Telethon" raising money for the hearing impaired.

He learned Japanese sign language to communicate with those who benefit from the telethon.

He spearheaded a $1,000 National Defense Transportation Association fundraiser to sponsor a visit for 50 Japanese orphans to Tokyo Disneyland.

And he has served as the chairperson of Yokota Special Olympics pulling together more than 200 military volunteers.

Dear Mr. Rove,

I have recently written some letters concerning the Bering Strait Project I would like to share with you. One letter was addressed to Senator McCain and Representative Don Young and the other to Transportation Trades Development division of AFL-CIO. In both letters the Project potential to improve our National Economy and to create so much needed new and meaningful employment opportunities is explained and emphasized. We are a nation of some 275 million people and growing and we have to have National Economy to accommodate millions of people, with widely diverse skills and abilities, in their search to find a lasting job paying living wages. There has to be a place in the Economic Mainstream for those with the highest education and skills as well as for those who have the God's gift to create Wealth with their hands. We have neglected the later for the last three decades or so and result of this neglect is that whole industrial spheres of our National economy, where millions of people made living for years, disappeared forever. We need to restore these industries to our national Economy. Realization of our Project would be very good and meaningful first step in that direction. US industry used to be a leader in manufacturing rail passenger cars, which were the World standard for comfort on the wheels. We can have such industry in our country again, together with electric locomotives building, renewal in construction machinery building, steel industry, mineral extraction industries and in forestry and agriculture.

Mr. Rove, our President is a brave man, who is guided by high moral and ethics standards and who does not look left or right while leading our country in what ever direction his moral compass points. That is commendable and as I said in one of my earlier letters to you, the History will treat him well. However, in his unrestricted war on Terror he took on a very treacherous and canning enemy, an enemy drawing his strength from primitive dogma of cruel and brutal culture with deep and wide spread roots in the era of the Dark Age. This war will be long and will have its ups and downs. The downs in this War, combined with continuing struggle of our Economy, can seriously jeopardize President's effort to stay in the White House

Dear Sirs,

My intention was to address this letter to Senator Patty Murray, Chairwoman of Senate Appropriation Subcommittee on Transportation. However, learning that she is from Seattle, I changed my mind. The letter is about a Project involving the State of Alaska and ever since the time when W.H Seward, the Secretary of State in President Lincoln Administration bought Alaska from Russia, (at 7.4 Million US Dollars it was the best real estate deal of the millennium) city and harbor of Seattle takes advantage of the fact that with no all weather all seasons high capacity overland transport connection to Alaska (railroad), all supplies to the State must go by sea. Seattle, being the most northern harbor on the US West Coast, gets most if not all of the Alaska shipping business. Since the Project we are proposing would put an end to Seattle importance as Alaska supply base, I could not help but to suspect, that The Honorable Patty Murray parochial interest may override her objectivity and she may not look too kindly on what we are proposing to do. I am most likely wrong, suspecting Senator Murray in such a way but to be on the safe side, mailing this letter to Senator from my home State and to Congressman from Alaska seems as the right thing to do. You both have been informed about our Project in the past and with this letter, I would like to address the impact the realization of the Project would have on current situation in our country and in the World and also to suggest some reasons behind my belief that this Project deserves our Government support.

Attn.: Mr. Michael B.

Dear Sir,

I got the address of your Organization from your web site and your last name was identified only by letter B. I apologize for using your last name initial only and I hope that the letter and the enclosed document will find its way to your hands.

What caught my eyes attention on the web site were the words T r a n s p o r t a t i o n and D e v e l o p m e n t. The Project I am about to describe for you is all about Development of Transportation. It is an old Project, first suggested by Colorado Territory Governor Mr. William Gilpin in 1849. The Project was very seriously considered in 1905-06 period, when under the leadership of Baron Loicq de Lobel a company was incorporated in the State of New Jersey with capital of more than $ 6 million (lots of money at that time) to pursue this Project. The Project was put on ice due to the political situation in Europe and the World, until our Group started to work on the Project in 1986 when the end of the Cold War was in sight. Our Organization logo at the top of this page captures quite accurately the concept of the Project: realization of the Project would connect railroad systems of 4 continents (North and South America, Asia, Europe and Africa) via tunnel under the Bering Strait. Description of the Project as well as the philosophy behind it is described in enclosed document. The document is a written record of my speech to the September 2002 conference of the American – Russian Ad Hoc Working Group held in Anchorage , Alaska. This Group was established during early Clinton administration and was led by Vice President Gore and Russian Prime Minister Chermomyrdin.

I realize that most of your concerns and your Organization activities are connected to Highway transport and building of railroads may not even be on your radar screen. However, it is indisputable Historical fact that railroads leave in its wake Wealth, the very Wealth on which the very existence of other modes of transport, trucking included, depends. Developing railroads is synonymous with development of industry, agriculture and commerce. In turn, the Industry, agriculture and commerce requires services of highway transport for distribution of materials and products outside of areas serviced directly by the railroad. With railroad as primary transport

HISPANIC RELIGIOUS LEADERS OF SOUTH FLORIDA

August 22, 2003

Mr. Karl Rove
Senior Advisor to the President
The White House
Washington, DC 20515

Re: Meeting Request from Religious Leaders

Dear Mr. Rove,

As Hispanic religious leaders representing over 200 multi-denominational churches in South Florida, we regret that you were unable to meet with us during our July and August visits to Washington, D.C. We will be in Washington again in the first week of September, along with religious leaders from across the United States representing hundreds of additional churches, all united in a single important cause: opposition to the Univision/HBC merger.

We respectfully renew our request to meet with you regarding our strong opposition to the Univision/HBC merger and to share with you the depth and permanence of the opposition that the Hispanic community of South Florida and other areas feel toward this merger. We will travel to a location other than Washington to accommodate your busy schedule.

Please find attached a sample citizen letter to the President expressing opposition to the merger, with a translation provided. This is one of over 50,000 letters opposing the merger collected in just eleven days by our churches and by college student leaders – tomorrow's adult community leaders. The letters are being collected at a pace of 6,000 to 8,000 per day, and over 90% of them are from Republican Hispanic voters in South Florida. For reasons that we do not quite understand, your offices, and the Executive offices in general, appear to be refusing to accept receipt of these more than 50,000 letters. While this issue has received extraordinary publicity throughout the Hispanic community, you may be unaware of how deeply this has permeated our culture and how committed we are to preserving Hispanic ownership of the media and opposing the Univision/HBC merger.

Mr. Rove, we sincerely appreciate your positive statements about reaching out to Hispanic voters. We also hope that you know how tirelessly the same people that worked on the 2000 Presidential campaign are now committed to preserving Hispanic ownership of the media and opposing the Univision/HBC merger.

We appreciate your consideration and respectfully ask that you grant us the opportunity to convey our community's united and important opposition before the Administration makes its decision. We are available to meet at any time. However, our pastoral duties do make Mondays and Tuesdays the easiest days to travel to Washington. The most important timing element is that we would like to convey the merger's negative impact on our community before the Administration determines the outcome. Please have your office contact Gwendolyn Alviani or Diane Untiedt at ( PRA 6 ; as they will coordinate our travel.

Thank you and may God Bless you and guide you as you deal each day with the important issues of our time.

Sincerely,

Thought you'd enjoy this letter to the editor in today's Sacramento Bee responding to an op-ed Sunday accusing you of dismantling the two-party system. Letter was written by Tony Quinn, a good friend of mine:

Re "He's dismantling 2-party system," Forum, June 15: Thank you for the important article on the Karl Rove Republicans' planned extinction of the Democrats. How awful. We need Democrats to make sure gay grandfathers are remembered on Father's Day and to stop Indian (sorry, Native American) mascots. But fear not, Rove won't succeed. Like fungus on a shower wall, the Democrats will always be with us.

GENERAL RULE is as follows. (This will be in more formal guidance, but I first want to get your reaction to the clarity of the following basic rule.)

Under federal regulations, appointees in the EOP may engage in political activities -- other than fundraising -- while on the job and while on government property. However, the government must be reimbursed for any costs incurred by the government in connection with such political activity that are over and beyond what the government otherwise would have incurred (that is, for those costs beyond the value of the property and the salary for the government employee). This basic rule is contained in 5 CFE 734 (especially 734.502). The rule will require that the RNC or other appropriate entity reimburse (or provide equipment) for additional costs associated with White House employees' political activities. That would not include local calls (which are a fixed cost like salary), but would include the costs of long-distance calls, FAX paper, computer paper, and the like. For that reason, I have asked Vickers to talk to you about installing, in conjunction with the RNC, the extra equipment needed to make this as easy as possible.

As to the definition of political activities, the best course is to treat all communications, documents, and events primarily related to an election or a campaign as political activities.

We are writing to ask for your signature in support of our President's landmark proposals in education reform.

As leaders of the new economy, we know well that education is the key to ensuring a prosperous future for our nation and its children. Fortunately, we have a President who is aware that teaching our next generation of leaders is the most important endeavor our nation will undertake. As businessmen and women, we realize that an educated workforce is not just a vital social goal, but a necessity in maintaining America's place of prominence in the new global marketplace. Education is the theme of the President's first week in office. He has outlined a series of initiatives, goals and policies that takes a formidable first step in preparing our children for life in the 21st Century.

The highlights of the President's proposal:

Increase Accountability for Student Performance: States, districts and schools that improve achievement will be rewarded. Failure will be sanctioned. Parents will know how well their child is learning, and that schools are held accountable for their effectiveness with annual state reading and math assessments in grades 3-8.

Focus on What Works: Federal dollars will be spent on effective, research based programs and practices. Funds will be targeted to improve schools and enhance teacher quality.

Reduce Bureaucracy and Increase Flexibility: Additional flexibility will be provided to states and school districts, and flexible funding will be increased at the local level.

Empower Parents: Parents will have more information about the quality of their child's school. Students in persistently low-performing schools will be given choice.

We support the President's education initiatives. Will you join us in endorsing his plan to improve the lives of America's children?

Subject: Some Questions from Larry Lindsey's Shop

Good afternoon! A couple of issues have come up for which Larry wanted to seek your advice.

1. May people complete their SF86 forms on their home computers?
2. Larry has an extensive rolodex. It includes more than addresses and phone/fax -- things like previous positions, family members, etc. If we obtained clearance to have the appropriate software installed on our WH computers, would the database become a presidential document?
3. Larry plans to hire a new Special Assistant to the President who, although American, is currently living in London. Is there a way to initiate her FBI background check so it can be underway prior to her leaving London?

Many, many thanks for your guidance.

Best regards,
Janet Walker

The event is, in fact, Wednesday, as I had thought.

My analysis is as follows. Under established principles, this is clearly an official event for the President, promoting his tax plan. He is free to invite whomever he wishes to that event. He has invited certain families to appear who will benefit from the tax cut. Paying for travel of guests to official/ceremonial events is not ordinarily a cost that the government bears. Therefore, it is not an augmentation of appropriations for the guest to pay his own way, for the guest's employer to pay for the guest's travel, or for an outside group to pay for the travel. In this case, the RNC has offered to pay for it presumably because it has an interest as a private group in supporting the President's tax plan, just as an employer might pay for travel of, for example, computer executives to attend a high-tech conference at the White House.

In addition, as of now, the tax families are appearing at a separate RNC breakfast Wed. morning that will be an event to show RNC's support for the President's tax plan. That further demonstrates that it is appropriate for RNC to pay for their travel.

The people whom I have consulted about this issue include OLC, the Office of Special Counsel, a former Deputy White House Counsel, and the RNC General Counsel. None has contradicted my own analysis of this. I have also raised it internally with 3 or 4 of you.

All of this said, there is perhaps a potential appearance problem here, although no legal or ethical problem of any kind that I can see. The easiest way to deal with appearance problems is to show precedent for this kind of arrangement. I do not have that nailed down yet. I do think the fact that there is a separate RNC event that day should allay concerns on that front, however, at least for this event.

Please let me know immediately if you have any disagreement with this analysis.

I also have attached a truly work in progress draft of the political/official memo, which raises separate but important issues. I should have a final draft of that for circulation shortly. I am attempting to nail down certain issues with the Office of Special Counsel (the office that enforces Hatch Act). Any thoughts on the draft are welcome, but not necessary yet until I circulate the final draft. Thanks.

MEMORANDUM FOR OFFICE OF STRATEGIC INITIATIVES
OFFICE OF PUBLIC LIASION

FROM: BRETT M. KAVANAUGH

SUBJECT: OFFICIAL ACTIVITY AND POLITICAL ACTIVITY

This memorandum responds to your inquiries regarding three issues: (i) the degree to which White House personnel may engage in political activities, even while on duty and in their offices; (ii) how such political activities are paid for; and (iii) how to distinguish political activities from official activities for purposes of reimbursement.

At the outset, it bears emphasis that this memorandum summarizes legal prohibitions and requirements. But appearance issues obviously can arise whenever political activity is conducted by government officials or political activity occurs in a government building -- even when the law expressly authorizes such political activity. In certain circumstances, therefore, it may be appropriate to take steps beyond what the law mandates to avoid appearance questions.

1. White House officers and employees generally are authorized to engage in political activities while on duty and in their offices.

The Hatch Act is the federal statute that restricts certain political activities by federal employees. 5 U.S.C. 7321-7324. Both the statute itself and the Office of Personnel Management regulations implementing the Hatch Act explicitly authorize the President, Vice President, and other Executive Office of the President officials (those whose duties and responsibilities continue outside normal business hours and while away from the normal duty post) to engage in political activities while on duty and in their offices. In particular, an "employee paid from an appropriation for the Executive Office of the President" and whose duties and responsibilities continue outside normal agency hours "may participate in political activities" including "(1) [w]hile he or she is on duty, . . . (3) while he or she is in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties by an individual employed or holding office in the Government of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof; or (4) [w]hile using a Government-owned or leased vehicle or while using a privately-owned vehicle in the discharge of official duties." 5 C.F.R. 734.502; see also 5 U.S.C. 7324 (same).

2. Certain kinds of political activities – particularly those related to fundraising – are nonetheless off-limits for White House officers and employees.

Notwithstanding the law's general authorization of political activities for White House officers and employees, certain political activities are nonetheless expressly prohibited. For example:

- Other than the President and Vice President, no officer or employee in the EOP may solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution from any person -- even when off duty and even when not on government property. 5 U.S.C. 7323.

- Although the President and Vice President may solicit political contributions, they may not solicit, accept, or receive political contributions while on government property, or when using government equipment such as a government cell phone. 18 U.S.C. 607. (This is the statute that Vice President Gore's telephone calls implicated.) The White House Residence and the Vice President's Residence are not considered government property for purposes of this provision.

- White House officers and employees may not run as a candidate for a partisan political office. 5 U.S.C. 7323.

- White House officers and employees may not knowingly solicit or discourage the participation in any political activity of any person who has an application for compensation, grant, contract, ruling, license, permit, or certificate pending before a department or agency in the Executive Branch. 5 U.S.C. 7323.

- White House officers and employees may not knowingly solicit or discourage the participation in any political activity of any person who is the subject of or a participant in an ongoing audit, investigation, or enforcement action being conducted by a department or agency within the Executive Branch. 5 U.S.C. 7323.

- White House officers and employees may not promise government employment or any other benefit in exchange for political activity, nor may they threaten deprivation of employment for political activity. 18 U.S.C. 600.

- White House officers and employees may not solicit or accept anything of value to obtain public office for another. 18 U.S.C. 210.

3. The Government must be reimbursed for the additional costs incurred by the Government in connection with political activities.

The next question, of course, focuses on the costs associated with political activities. The long-standing rule that governs in this area is that "appropriated funds should not be used to pay for political events, and absent authority to the contrary, political funds should not be used to pay for official events." O.L.C. Memorandum of Mar. 24, 1982, from Theodore B. Olson to Fred F. Fielding, at 3.

Consistent with this basic principle, the Hatch Act and its implementing regulations require the government to be reimbursed for such political activities. "The costs associated with the political activities described in [the above section] may not be paid for by money derived from the Treasury of the United States. Costs associated with a political activity are deemed not to be paid for by money derived from the Treasury of the United States if the Treasury is reimbursed for the costs within a reasonable period of time." 5 C.F.R. 734.503.

It bears mention that only those costs that are beyond what the Government otherwise would have incurred are to be reimbursed. The regulations provide:

> For purposes of this section, costs associated with a political activity do not include any costs that the Government would have or have incurred regardless of whether the activity was political. Examples of such costs are:
> (1) The compensation of the employee;
> (2) The value of any office or other real property owned or leased by the Government;
> (3) The compensation and expenses of any Government employee that is required in the performance of his or her duties to accompany or assist the person engaging in the political activity; and
> (4) The cost of special security arrangements for the person engaging in the political activity, including special transportation vehicles or methods.

5 C.F.R. 734.503.

The issue of compensation for political activities will often arise in three instances: (i) political travel by the President and EOP officials to political events; (ii) political events at the White House; and (iii) use of White House equipment for political purposes.

As to the first issue, travel, there are detailed regulations that govern allocation of costs on trips where there is any political component. The White House Travel Office historically has calculated the percentage of the trip that should be allocated to political expenses and then charged the relevant political organization.

As to political events, the RNC or appropriate entity will pay for political events. The White House Residence may be used to host political events, as well as certain rooms outside the Residence. Certain areas of the White House are traditionally off limits for political use. The use of the White House Residence for political events is, needless to say, an issue that raises substantial questions of appearance and appropriateness beyond the rules of law outlined here.

As to the use of equipment, one possibility would be for the RNC to reimburse the additional costs associated with use of White House equipment for political purposes. However, the better practice is to install separate "political" FAX machines, copiers, computers, and printers in appropriate offices. (Also, no one should use their official cell phones for political purposes.)

4. Political activity is activity that primarily relates to the functions of a political party or a specific election or campaign.

The distinction between official activity and political activity is critical to questions of payment and reimbursement, as well as where events can be held in the White House. The OPM regulations define "political activity" as "an activity directed toward the success or failure of a political party, candidate for partisan political office, or partisan political group."

That definition aside, it is well recognized that the line between official and political activity is not always easy to draw. As the Office of Legal Counsel has explained, the President's official role is "necessarily political in the broad sense that [he] must formulate, explain, advocate and defend policies. To the extent that the President and Vice President generate support for their policies and programs, they are also executing and fulfilling their official responsibilities. . . . Thus, it is simply not possible to divide many of the actions of the President and Vice President into utterly official or purely political categories. To attempt to do so in most cases would ignore the nature of our political system and the structure of our government." Id. at 2. The Office of Legal Counsel thus has advised that such divisions must be "approached with common sense and a god faith effort to apply the spirit of the principles . . ., and they must be judged with considerable deference to the decisions of the persons directly involved in making the decisions."

I would delete the picture of the White House. Also, just for this time only, can you delete the links to the articles. I do not have a clear answer on whether that is appropriate or permissible. Are you aware of other government agencies (Congress, exec agencies) that include links to articles? If so, let me know ASAP because that would help. Thanks.

THE BRIEFING ROOM

From the Office of Strategic Initiatives

Volume 1

THIS WEEK'S AGENDA: RELIEF FOR ALL TAXPAYERS

This week President Bush will send to Congress a fair, responsible agenda that will cut taxes for everyone who pays income taxes, spur economic growth, and tear down the high tax barriers that keep low income Americans from accessing the middle class. The Bush plan will:

- Give a tax cut to every family that pays income taxes.
- Replace the current five-rate tax structure with four lower rates—10, 15, 25, and 33%.
- Double the child tax credit to $1000.
- Reduce the marriage penalty.
- Eliminate the death tax.
- Expand the charitable tax deduction.
- Make the research and development tax credit permanent.

These steps are needed because the current tax code is unfair and the economy is slowing. Under the current system, a single mom making $22,000 a year pays a higher marginal tax rate than someone making $200,000 a year. Today, federal taxes are the highest ever during peacetime. Consumer confidence has dropped for 4 straight months. Layoffs are increasing. Last year's fourth quarter growth was the slowest in a decade.

IN THE NEWS

NOTABLE QUOTABLES

"Should current economic weakness spread beyond what appears likely, having a tax cut in place may, in fact, do noticeable good."—Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, 1/24

"Right now, our taxes have never been higher. Right now, our surplus has never been greater. To me, it's just common sense you deal with the first by using the second." –Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), 1/21

A LOOK AHEAD

February 5—President Bush meets taxpayers to discuss his tax relief plan giving the average family a $1600 tax cut and lowering the bottom rate from 15% to 10%.

February 6—Small business leaders meet the President to discuss how tax cuts will spur economic growth and job creation.

February 7—The President hosts reunion of "tax families" who supported his plan for across-the-board tax reduction during the campaign.

February 8—The President meets with Latino and high-tech business leaders and sends his blueprint for tax relief and economic growth to Congress.

The only concerns that I see are preferential treatment and consent: both who is on the list of recipients of the Rove newsletter (will it be anyone who wants to be on it) and what organizations are listed as links could raise questions of favoritism if there are persons being excluded from the distribution system. Also, I would not use any links unless the person or entity linked had consented to the link.

FYI, so that you'll know what these emails are all about when you start receiving them. . . "LRMs" relate to agency action and outside the White House staffing process.

Jim:

Thanks for your earlier discussions with me regarding the emails that Judge Gonzales and I have been receiving on LRMs and the WH Counsel's role in reviewing them.

We have decided to farm these items out to our attorneys in the same way that we distribute items staffed by the White House -- that is, they should all enter the Counsel's Office at one central point, and then that point person will distribute them internally. Emails on LRMs intended for the Counsel's Office should be sent to Ansley Tillman.

Ansley will log the LRM emails and forward them electronically to an attorney in our office. Should the attorney have comments, Ansley will send the comments on to the OMB sender.

If you have any questions about this proposal, please just let me know.

The events of the last few weeks with the Clintons likely mean that our gift policies and practices will be under even greater and more microscopic scrutiny in the years ahead. One immediate thought: With respect to one small piece of that -- widely attended events -- we should consider whether it would be safer to make the "interests of the agency" detrermination a formalized, written process that requires written sign-off by both the head of the unit (Political Affairs, Communications, etc.) and by the Counsel's office.

More broadly, what goes around around comes around and we can expect extraordinarily intense examination of the White House's gift receipt practices (as well as our written policies from this office). We need to be 100% prepared to explain publicly our handling of every gift and make sure everyone else can do so as well (Gift Unit, First Lady's office). In our written memo, for example, I would continue to stress -- as we have been orally -- that it is far easier and safer (i) to treat every arguably non-personal "gift" as government property and (ii) to pay for any arguably non-personal event or game or party that you are invited to by an outsider, absent written clearance from your supervisor and Counsel that it is in the interest of the agency for you to attend.

Where are we on OEOB Staff Assistants? We're getting to the point now where it would be extremely helpful to have some phone coverage and other help over here.

Also, I would recommend that once we have our full complement of support staff in OEOB, we do some office shuffling to make sure that each major pod of attorney offices has at least one person in the outside office. It's not very efficient, for example, having both paralegals officing in the same pod.

I have analyzed this and confirmed my answer to this today with the Office of Special Counsel, which is the independent government agency that enforces the Hatch Act.

An e-mail is like a local phone call in terms of cost; that is, the government incurs no extra costs as a result of such activity.
Therefore, under Hatch Act regulations, you may send this e-mail on your White House e-mail account.

This is entirely appropriate OPA activity. The costs associated with this (stamps, paper) probably should be paid by RNC, which will be easy to accomplish once the RNC equipment is installed.

- state chairs
- governors
- finance chairs
- lt govs.
- state legislators
- R Congressmen and Senators and their chiefs of staff
- state parties
- political consultants we identify
- political reporters

can we do this and what do we have to be aware of? do you need anything from me? a sample of the letter when it's completed perhaps?

Brett - I work in Political Affairs and have a quick question re: corresponding w/ the RNC on my White House computer.

When PPO sends us names of candidates being considered for Administration jobs, one of the things we check out is their vote history. We have the RNC run this check for us, and to date have been using RNC cell phones to give them the names and addresses and to get the report back from them. Now, though the large number of names we're trying to get checked makes the phone method pretty unwieldy. It's far easier if we can e-mail a list on a daily basis to the RNC and have them e-mail back their report.

We do have RNC laptops, but still have no way to use them for e-mail from here. Hopefully, soon we will get analog lines and will be able to do that, and the issue will be moot. In the meantime, though, any advice? Can we use our computers here for that purpose? Thanks much.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

I am pleased to report that the problem has been resolved, and that steps have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all users may now delete messages which do not need to be maintained in their in or out boxes. E-mails that should be preserved locally as a record of office activities may be printed out with correspondence information (i.e. date, time, sender, recipient and subject of the message), and filed in the appropriate place. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency.

Thanks. As a follow up, I made a few changes to the second paragraph, and added a new sentence at the end.

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages which do not need to be maintained in their in or out boxes. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency.

Any chance of getting these as a percentage figure? For example, the CA9 and CA6 figures may be much less as a percentage of total sittings than the absolute stats make them otherwise appear.

I was writing to inquire into the process/procedure for having letters written from President Bush. I work in the political affairs department, and we would like to work with you or someone in your department to send letters on a regualr basis to state organizations having events, state leaders etc.

Can you let me know the best way we can do this. Thanks

I was literally just informed that I have to be in an 11:30 meeting with the Judge and SS guys on Secret Service issues.

Can we move our meeting until 2:00? Sorry.

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. By negative implication, the memo may be read to say that such people should have been preserving their e-mails. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

Thanks. Phil Larsen has received the draft and will be coordinating it with Hector Irastorza, Deputy Assistant to the President for Management and Administration. As a matter of protocol, he wants to make sure that the Counsel to the President has seen and supports this draft first. It would be great if you can confirm that Judge Gonzales concurs so Phil can move this forward. It would also be helpful if you could relate any views Judge Gonzales has on who should sign, or confirm that your views on that represent those of the Counsel. Adam, 5-1268

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

Can we change the date in the new sentence to on or after January 20? Some people who came on board after September 30 may have heard of the order internally (even though they were unaffected), and would need to know. However, I think this is much less likely for folks who came on with the transition. Also, is "disregard" or "ignore" better?

Subject: Re: Draft Re: Resoution of E-mail Problem

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. By negative implication, the memo may be read to say that such people should have been preserving their e-mails. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

Thanks. Phil Larsen has received the draft and will be coordinating it with Hector Irastorza, Deputy Assistant to the President for Management and Administration. As a matter of protocol, he wants to make sure that the Counsel to the President has seen and supports this draft first. It would be great if you can confirm that Judge Gonzales concurs so Phil can move this forward. It would also be helpful if you could relate any views Judge Gonzales has on who should sign, or confirm that your views on that represent those of the Counsel. Adam, 5-1268

I'll let you know as soon as we close the loop. In the meantime, you may want to review Brett's comments below regarding the issue of who should sign. Adam, 5-1268

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

You may disregard this memorandum if you began your employment in the Executive Office of the President on or after January 20, 2001.

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

TARGET STATE POLITICAL PLAN TEMPLATE

I. Key Long Term State Issues—Brief description of issues important to the state, the federal impact on those issues, and key decision dates and ways that the Administration can impact these decisions to help the state. Include issues with numerous policy implications (e.g., Great Lakes, the auto industry and Michigan; Immigration, the everglades, off shore drilling and Florida; Agriculture and Iowa)

II. Key Short Term Issues—Same as above but more unique and discrete issues that are only likely to come up once (e.g., the Piketown Uranium plant in Ohio)

III. Key Personnel for the State—Listing of key regional positions, the state interest in them, and recommended personnel

IV. Calendar of key events for attendance, satellite feed, greeting etc.

V. Demographic Analysis—Who we need to reach out to in the state, where we need to reach out, and who in the Administration can reach out

   A. Media market analysis of President Bush's performance in 2000, comparison to 1996 results, number of swing voters per media market, and performance among key demographic groups in the media market

   B. Discussion of who in the Administration (POTUS, VPOTUS, Cabinet) can best outreach in the key media markets

VI. Grassroots outreach—Plan (email, team leader program, letters to the editor, etc.) for reaching out to key groups in the state on above issues and personnel decisions

VII. Political Activity

A. Redistricting—Who is making decisions, best and worst case scenarios
B. Key dates for candidate recruitment, filing deadlines, etc.
C. Assessment of strength of candidates—incumbents and nominees

VIII. Outreach to Key Groups—Quantify the numbers in the following groups in the states, including media market, and identify key issues that can be used to reach out to each:

   A. Wired Workers
   B. Hispanics
   C. African Americans
   D. Catholics
   E. Rural Voters
   F. Suburbanites

OFFICE OF POLITICAL AFFAIRS
MISSION STATEMENT

1. To focus on critical issues in target states:
    - Developing and executing a political plan to win target states, including
        - Identify key issues and how the federal government affects those issues
        - Determine the groups that comprise a winning coalition, state opinion leaders within those groups, and activities that will appeal to those groups
            - Identify any members of those groups for Administration positions
            - Regularly reach out to opinion leaders within these groups
            - Work with the RNC to build and feed a grassroots within these constituencies
        - Rank order the state's media markets, and proposed numbers of visits, locations of visits
        - Identify rogue Republican and Democratic opinion leaders, political leaders, and consultants for outreach
        - Develop specific outreach plans for:
            - Catholics
            - Hispanics
            - Wired Workers
            - Rural areas
            - Urban outreach
        - Work with the state party, RNC, and local "base" opinion leaders to establish regular contact with and build a grassroots for:
            - Social Conservatives
            - Sportsmen
        - Maintain and strengthen the grassroots organizations developed during the campaign
            - Work with RNC on the care and feeding of county chairs, team leaders, etc.
            - Mobilize organizations to support the President's agenda
    - DC based outreach to national leadership of key groups
        - Trade unions
        - Social conservatives
        - Catholics
        - Farming/ranching organizations

2. To support the NRCC, NRSC, and RGA efforts to keep Republican control of Congress, governorships, state legislatures, and other Constitutional offices by:
    - Reviewing vulnerable incumbents' political plans and ensuring that OPA helps, where possible and appropriate, including:
        - Identifying politically important issues
        - Recommending or executing possible meetings with, or visits by, Administration officials
    - Assist with candidate recruitment, regularly reaching out to opinion leaders within the state to monitor recruitment and identifying popular officials to be recruited, particularly Hispanics, African-Americans, and women
    - Contact Republican nominees for office to determine how the Administration can be helpful
    - Monitor redistricting activities and assist when appropriate

3. To educate the public about the President's initiatives through
    - Op eds, letters to the editor, talk radio call in, and other media activities by local opinion leaders
    - Town hall meetings and other grassroots activities, when appropriate
    - Regular email

4. To support the efforts of OLA to pass the President's initiatives by
    - Identifying and reaching out to local opinion leaders and influencers
    - Organizing grassroots on the ground support for the President's program

5. To assist in identifying qualified, loyal candidates for Administration positions by:
    - Vetting possible nominees
    - Proactively identifying and promoting qualified candidates

One caution from your event meeting was the biPartisianship of the congressional delegation. I would run by Brett Kavanaugh or whomever you have been working with in Legal to be sure the co del make up and the fact that some may be flying in AF 1 as well as whether they were invited or just attending. This would be simply to ensure that the delegation doesn't impact in any way the distinction of this event as official travel. I would also review this at the 3 pm countdown meeting as OA can also provide guidance (at which OA, MnA, WHMO, WHCA, USSS should all be attending).

Moose,

I'm over in speechwriting and I just have a quick question. We got a call from someone involved in a campaign event, who was asking if we could send him a transcript of a speech the President gave while he was still campaigning (back in September 2000). He's trying to get it in order to pass it on to a guy from an organization that helped organize the event and supported Bush's efforts in Washington state.

The question is basically, Is there a problem with sending a campaign document to a campiagn supporter from our government office using government property (the fax)?

Just wanted to be safe before I proceeded.

Thanks,
Ed.

Special Hearing on Promoting Health for Persons with Mental Retardation

before the U.S. Senate Committee on Appropriations

Anchorage, AK

March 5, 2000

Senator Stevens and Members of the Committee:

I am Dr. David Satcher, U.S. Surgeon General. I am pleased to appear before you today to discuss the need to promote health for persons with mental retardation and to go over the findings of a privately funded literature review by Special Olympics, Inc. and Yale University pertaining to the health needs of the mentally retarded. Thank you for this opportunity.

I appreciate the work of the Special Olympics not only for promoting physical activity among persons with mental retardation but also for providing opportunities for them to develop their talent and performance and for highlighting their unmet health care needs.

The Data on Persons with Mental Retardation and the Limitations of that Data

In the United States, we estimate that the prevalence of mental retardation ranges from 2 to 7.5 million people. Using the 1994 NHIS Disability Supplement, Phase I, to identify people with mental retardation or developmental disabilities, researchers estimated mental retardation prevalence of 3.4 percent for the 0-5 age group, 2.5 percent for the 6-18 age group, and .5 percent for those 19 years of age and older.

Worldwide, there are 170 million people with mental retardation, according to World Health Organization estimates. That's nearly 3 percent of the global population.

In the last 40 years, we have witnessed dramatic change in sentiments regarding those with mental retardation. Public policy and practice with regard to the education and treatment of individuals with cognitive limitations began to change in the 1960s and 1970s. Clinical and administrative practices began to reflect empirical findings that learning and improvements in adaptive behavior were enhanced by treatment in less restrictive community-based residential, training, and work environments as opposed to large, overcrowded, and understaffed institutions.

Since the late 1980's the nation's public health system has formally recognized the health needs of people with disabilities and consequently, has developed programs to address their specific health concerns, and has set goals to eliminate health disparities relative to people without disabilities.

Today, mental retardation is diagnosed using three generally accepted criteria: an IQ that is below 70-75; significant limitations existing in two or more adaptive skills areas, such as communications, self-care, functional academics, and home living; and presence of the condition before age 18.

Our ability to fully assess the prevalence of mental retardation in the United States is limited for several reasons:

- We lack a surveillance system that targets the health status and needs of persons with mental retardation. Existing survey-based public health surveillance in the United States is inadequate for identifying people with mild cognitive limitations.

- When we launched the Healthy People 2010 last year, the nation's health goals and objectives for this decade, it marked the first time we ever included a full chapter on disabilities. However, due to the limitations in data, we were not able to specifically address the health status, needs and access issues confronting millions of Americans with mental retardation.

- We published the landmark Surgeon General's Report on Mental Health in December 1999. While it offers a comprehensive view of mental health in the United States based on the best available science and an extensive discussion of mental disorders and problems with stigma and access, it still lacks specific information on persons with mental retardation because of the shortfalls in data.

- Similarly, the Surgeon General's Report on Oral Health provided a sweeping discussion of the oral health needs in this country with a special focus on oral health needs of persons with disabilities, nevertheless the discussion of the unique needs of persons with mental retardation was limited due to lack of data.

The Causes/Risk Factors for Mental Retardation

Mental retardation can be caused by any condition that impairs development of the brain before birth, during birth or in the childhood years. Many causes are associated with mental retardation.

It is important to accurately and consistently define mental retardation because of its impact on the prevalence. The most widely used definition comes from the American Association for Mental Retardation (AAMR), which defines mental retardation as the onset of significant limitations in both general intellectual and adaptive functioning during the developmental period, that is, 18 years and under. Although not formally a part of the definition of mental retardation, the APA includes mental retardation in the DSM-IV, classifying it as a mental disorder.

Despite the importance of consistency, mental retardation is not always defined the same way across research studies or service agencies, even within the same state. Some definitions rely solely on IQ scores, others only use adaptive behaviors, while others use a combination of both. Many studies are based on broad categorizations of severity, using labels such as mild, moderate, severe and profound, assigning a corresponding IQ range to each term (mild = 50-55 to 70, moderate = 34-40 to 50-55, severe = 20-25 to 35-40 and provound <20-25.)

The most well-documented approach involves two classifications: cultural/familial and biologic/organic, based on the prevalence or absence of a known organic etiology. Cultural/familial refers to individuals with IQs of 50-70, who do not have any identifiable physiological deficit. They cognitively develop at a slower rate and do not reach the same cognitive levels as the general population.

Those in the organic group have an identifiable physiological deficit and typically have IQs lower than 50, although sometimes individuals with higher IQs in the 50-70 range can be included in this group. It would also include genetic causes such as Down's Syndrome.

The Range of Health Problems/Diseases and Conditions Affecting the Mentally Retarded

The health issues for individuals with mental retardation are similar to the health issues for many disabling conditions, namely, physical activity, nutrition, access to health care, clinical preventive services, oral health, mental health, and family care giving.

While population based data are unavailable, research using samples of convenience have demonstrated that people with mental retardation are at increased risk for obesity, cardiovascular disease, osteoporosis, seizures, mental illness and behavior disorders, hearing and vision problems, and poor conditioning and fitness. Cohort and group effects, such as those related to institutional experience and residential status, are generally poorly controlled.

In 1991, heart disease was the leading cause of death for people with severe mental retardation.

Overweight and obesity levels in this country have reached epidemic proportions. However, people with mental retardation have been reported to be at a much higher risk for obesity than their peers without retardation. In some studies up to 46% of individuals with mild mental retardation were obese.

The type of living arrangement was strongly linked to obesity. Higher percentages of obesity were noted among people in community residential environments. Especially troubling was the finding that 55.3% of individuals with mild cognitive limitations residing with their natural families were found to be obese.

These studies also revealed a strong link between obesity and coronary heart disease, cancer, social stigma, and discrimination.

Significantly lower bone mineral density has been reported for a group of people with moderate to mild mental retardation with a mean age of 35 years when compared with age-matched controls.

The Unique Impact of Health Problems/Diseases and Conditions Affecting the Mentally Retarded

The mentally retarded face unique health problems resulting in lower life expectancies and lower quality of life.

Life expectancy of people with mental retardation has increased to the extent that younger adults with mental retardation are expected to demonstrate little disparity in longevity however, for older adults, disparities continue to exist. Specific subpopulations, people with Down syndrome for example, are at increased risk for premature mortality.

A number of studies demonstrate that adults with mental retardation compare unfavorably with their peers without mental retardation in terms of activity and fitness levels, obesity, resulting in increased risk for disease and poor quality of life, cardiovascular fitness and cholesterol levels, muscular strength and endurance, and cardiovascular disease.

As more people with mild cognitive limitations are living in unsupervised environments or are under the occasional care of family members, service coordinators, friends, or other benefactors, there is little opportunity for organized activities specifically targeted at this population.

The Mentally Retarded Suffer Disproportionately from Lack of Access to Appropriate Health Care

Health promotion, disease prevention, early detection and universal access to care are the cornerstones of a balanced community health system. Yet, in each of these areas, the mentally retarded face barriers.

Research has demonstrated that primary care providers are unprepared or otherwise are reluctant to provide routine and emergency medical and dental care to people with mental retardation. Many providers refuse to serve, or limit the number of people served under the Medicaid program, a source of coverage for many people with mental retardation. Inadequate reimbursement is a major problem, especially for dental services. Dental care for adults is a particularly difficult matter in that, by and large, Medicaid does not cover adult dental care.

For example, many health professionals have little exposure to individuals with mental retardation and, as a result, are sometimes uncomfortable treating them. The same is true of some psychiatrists and psychologists in the mental health field, who sometimes seem unaware that this group can experience mental health problems. That's tragic considering that people with mental retardation have been reported to be at higher risk for behavioral and emotional difficulties than the general population, with prevalence ranging from 20-40%.

In addition, the medical and dental care of those individuals in community-based residences is no longer obtained from a centralized institutional staff but from primary care providers in the community. Increases in the use of community-based primary health care has not been without difficulty and the decentralization of services has brought it with the need for increased personal responsibility in terms of self-advocacy, self-determination and, in many cases, increased care giving responsibilities by families, often life-long care-giving responsibilities.

"Special Olympics International is to be commended for expanding its "Special Smiles" Program into its new Healthy Athletes Initiative. The Health Athletes Initiative works to improve the overall health of each Special Olympics athlete. Through this initiative SOI is increasing public awareness of the health needs of people with mental retardation, increasing their access to care, and training professional to care for people with special needs.

The Special Smiles program, initiated in 1993, includes a non-invasive oral exam, brushing and flossing instructions, mouthguard fabrication (at selected sites), oral hygiene products, including toothbrush, toothpaste, and floss, and educational materials. Participating athletes benefit from a referral program designed to link people with special needs with dental professionals who are experienced in providing dental care to patients with mental retardation. Since 1993, over 53,000 athletes have been screened during Special Olympic State Games in 36 States and 2 international sites."

Finally, we must point out that few formal connections exist between public health agencies and educational systems and other agencies that serve people with mild cognitive limitations.

Vision for the Future

The greatest barriers to the improvement in health status for persons with mental retardation include negative attitudes among the public, governments, service providers and in some instances among family members. Until the early 1970s, public policy emphasized the segregation of people with mental retardation from the rest of the population -- first for therapeutic reasons and later for the "protection of society."

While we have overcome many of these barriers, we still have a distance to go before we reach our goal. We believe that the quality of life can be better in the future if we strategically focus our efforts in the following areas:

- A surveillance system that specifically targets the health status and needs of the mentally retarded should be strengthened.

- Public health surveillance of people with mental retardation to track prevalence, health status, risk behaviors, quality of life, and comorbid conditions. Such a surveillance program is challenging given that the nature of the condition limits the participation of the informant, people with mental retardation may not have ready access to a telephone, and the reluctance of people to disclose mental retardation.

- The 10 Leading Health Indicators of Healthy People 2010 should, when and where possible, be followed specifically for persons with mental retardation with measurable objectives. The first five indicators are lifestyle indicators: physical activity, overweight and obesity, tobacco use, substance abuse, and responsible sexual behavior. The remaining five are health systems indicators: mental health, injury and violence prevention, environmental quality, immunization, and access to health care.

- A balanced community-based health system should be developed and implemented for the mentally retarded. It should balance health promotion, disease prevention, early detection and universal access to care.

- Explore ways in which the federal government can be more responsive to the unique challenges and needs of the mentally retarded.

- As with other areas of disparity in health, the legal implications of the plight of the mentally retarded should be addressed. We should, therefore, work to protect the legal rights of the mentally retarded.

- The research community should develop a research agenda targeting the problems, needs and opportunities for the mentally retarded.

The theme of the Special Olympics is one that all of us can appreciate -- "Let me win, but even if I don't, let me be brave in my attempt." We are all inspired by the sheer determination and persistence we see in the athletes who participate in the Special Olympics and it is out of that spirit that we must forge ahead toward this vision for the future.

I realize these strategies represent high aims, but we owe it – not only to persons with mental retardation but to all Americans – to press forward in a brave attempt to reach them

Does anyone have an opinion whether the communications office can do the following:

When a member of the general public requests a copy of a speech Bush made during the campaign (of which the WH doesn't have an archive), the staff would like to retrieve a copy of the speech from media sources, e.g., the AP, to send to the requesting individual.

I am already looking at the copyright issue.

When do you want to meet about district courts? One sensible and to divide the Office into teams that will cover different geographical

DRAFT – MARCH 2, 2001 – 12:00 PM

CRM DIV. Testimony for PSI Hearings - March 6, 2001

Chairman Collins, Senator Levin, and Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for the opportunity to appear before the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. We have reviewed the Subcommittee's recent report, "Correspondent Banking: A Gateway to Money Laundering" (February 5, 2001), and are pleased to offer the Department of Justice's views regarding the use and abuse of correspondent banking relationships in the United States.

We have been pleased, in the past, to provide the Subcommittee with information concerning U.S. prosecutions related to correspondent bank relationships, and to share our views and insights on the prosecutive and investigative obstacles and hindrances presented by correspondent bank accounts. Further, we look forward to continuing our cooperative efforts with the Subcommittee to work toward the best possible statutory and regulatory framework to support our anti-money laundering enforcement efforts.

Today, you have asked the Department of Justice to focus its remarks in three main areas identified in the Subcommittee's Report : (1) the extent to which money laundering through U.S. correspondent bank accounts is a significant law enforcement concern; (2) the legal and practical challenges in seizing putative illicit funds and identifying beneficial owners of and depositors into such accounts; and (3) our views on recommended amendments of forfeiture law related to correspondent bank accounts and other Subcommittee recommendations.

Subcommittee Report on Correspondent Banking

At the outset, we would like to commend the Subcommittee for its fine efforts in carefully researching and producing the report on correspondent banking. As the Subcommittee members and your staff know, money laundering is increasingly an international phenomenon, involving trillions of legitimate dollars masking hundreds of millions of illicit proceeds flowing through the same international and domestic clearinghouses and wire-messaging systems each and every day.

Access to the U.S. financial system through dollar-currency clearinghouses is fundamental to the world's legitimate financial markets, and correspondent banking is an essential service that financial institutions provide to customers around the globe. Unfortunately, permitting legitimate account-holders to have access to these financial services also necessarily allows international money launderers and other criminals to gain similar access to the same system. Your report has correctly identified and highlighted this significant vulnerability of our financial system which has been and continues to be exploited by money launderers and other financial criminals worldwide. Infiltration of the global financial system by such substantial sums of illicit proceeds corrodes the integrity of the entire mechanism, as well as erodes the tax base of the country. The Subcommittee's report on correspondent banking, as well as the previous one on private banking, makes clear that without the proper monitoring and supervision, legitimate and necessary financial mechanisms can and undoubtedly will become corrupted.

Impact of Correspondent Banking on Law Enforcement

The international movement of illicit proceeds through correspondent bank accounts servicing foreign institutions is often difficult to detect. And, even when detected, law enforcement may encounter significant hurdles in tracing, seizing, and forfeiting such funds.

Typically, correspondent bank accounts are used in the "layering" or "integration" stages of money laundering, in which the criminal financiers attempt to mask the origin and nature of the underlying funds, after the proceeds have already been "placed" into the financial system. Determining the true beneficial owner of funds being transferred through a correspondent account can be a very difficult challenge for investigators in these second and third stages of money laundering.

Again and again, law enforcement investigations – despite best efforts by dedicated professional investigators – continue to be frustrated by the movements of criminally-derived funds into and through certain jurisdictions where our ability to identify the true beneficial owner is hampered or stymied. Most often, this frustration occurs, as noted in your report, when U.S. financial institutions offer banking relations to foreign "shell" banks, "offshore" banks, and other banks located in countries with improper bank secrecy for customers and little or no effective anti-money laundering or forfeiture laws or regulations.

In many cases, a foreign bank may claim ownership of the entire amount in a correspondent account which can have the effect of protecting and shielding the actual underlying owner of the funds and allows the owner to hide behind the facade of the bank. In addition, some foreign governments impose legal restrictions and obstacles making it more difficult – if not impossible – to determine the true identity of the owner of the funds. In short, undue bank secrecy, ineffective licensing and regulatory oversight, and lack of effective anti-money laundering controls combine to make such cases a nightmare for financial crime investigators and regulators.

In foreign jurisdictions where "shell" banks, or "offshore" banks operate with impunity, banks must be required to keep and maintain proper account and transaction records – particularly, as they relate to the true beneficial owners of funds or property – as they are required to do so in the U.S. It is important to keep such records for two primary reasons: (1) to protect the bank against any liabilities assumed from questionable customers; and (2) to facilitate the legitimate needs of effective law enforcement. We are working with several foreign governments to establish and institute greater regulatory anti-money laundering controls over their financial institutions.

Nevertheless, even in locations where foreign banks are not required to maintain banking records, U.S. institutions must take all reasonable steps to ensure the bona fides of the foreign bank account-holder. U.S. institutions must understand the scope and rigor of the anti-money laundering and forfeiture regime under which the foreign institution operates – as well as the risks and consequences resulting from such business transactions. U.S. banks should assume responsibility for the lapses in the anti-money laundering programs of the foreign bank and the licensing jurisdiction. In addition, the U.S. insitution should be required to continually monitor the correspondent banking relationship on an ongoing basis, including its transaction activity and the legitimacy of the underlying account-holder(s). Further, law enforcement must be permitted to pierce the unnecessary bank secrecy laws, so that it can obtain such records.

In sum, we must ensure that U.S. law permits us to prosecute individuals knowingly facilitating the transfer of illicit funds through correspondent bank accounts, and to identify, seize, freeze, and forfeit illicit funds being transacted through such accounts.

Successes in the Fight Against International Money Laundering

The Departments of Justice and the Treasury have worked hard and scored important successes in the fight against money laundering.

"Operation Skymaster" was a highly successful undercover operation attacking money laundering that was taking place through the Black Market Peso Exchange (BMPE). From March 1997 through May 1999, Operation Skymaster undercover agents and informants managed to gain the trust of Colombian peso brokers working for Colombian narcotics traffickers. The BMPE system relies on peso brokers in Colombia who convert drug dollars collected and held in the United States to pesos for the Colombian drug suppliers in Colombia through the use of U.S. consumer goods imported into Colombia for Colombian businesses and paid for by U.S. drug dollars.

In this case, the peso brokers directed the undercover agents pick up the proceeds from drug sales at particular locations and at particular times. The undercover agents would then deposit the drug cash into government-controlled bank accounts and wire transfer such funds to bank accounts designated by the peso brokers. Using the Colombian BMPE system, the peso brokers then wire transferred the dollars in the undercover bank accounts to U.S. exporters as payment for the good received by the Colombian importers. To complete the laundering cycle, the importers would receive confirmation that the wire-transfers were sent and pay the peso brokers the equivalent amount in pesos. Subsequently, the peso brokers delivered the pesos to the Colombian drug trafficking groups.

Operation Skymaster combined the strengths of the United States Customs Service with the United States Attorney's Office in Mobile, Alabama and the Department of Justice, Criminal Division and has already resulted in 12 convictions on money laundering drug conspiracy charges, as well as 17 other defendants formally charged in this case.

Similarly, in December 1999, five defendants were indicted in Atlanta, as part of the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF) anti-money laundering investigation entitled "Operation Juno," which involved a multi-million dollar money laundering scheme. Undercover agents participating in Operation Juno picked up drug proceeds usually ranging between $100,000 and $500,000 in U.S. currency in Dallas, Houston, New York, Newark, Providence, and Chicago, as well as Madrid and Rome, and subsequently wire-transferred the funds from the originating/collection city to an undercover bank account in Atlanta and then distributed to various accounts in the U.S. and around the world. As in Operation Skymaster, the drug proceeds in Operation Juno were laundered through the Colombian Black Market Peso Exchange, as peso brokers "exchanged" the dollars on deposit in the undercover bank accounts for Colombian pesos obtained from Colombian importers of U.S. goods. Operation Juno combined the investigative and prosecutive efforts Drug Enforcement Administration, the Internal Revenue Service Criminal Investigation Division and the United States Attorney's Office in Atlanta.

While Operations Skymaster and Juno provide examples of investigations that have succeeded in terms of criminal investigations, indictments, convictions, and forfeiture of assets, they also have revealed and highlighted some problems facing law enforcement in tracing and forfeiting criminal proceeds in foreign countries. Indeed, our money laundering laws, first enacted in 1986 to address a primarily domestic problem, have not kept up with the developments in technology and international commerce since that time.

In the cases resulting from Operations Juno and Skymaster cases (described above), attorneys in the Criminal Division filed civil forfeiture complaints in the District of Columbia against the funds wire transferred to bank accounts outside of the United States. Our efforts to freeze and forfeit these funds have met a variety of results, depending upon the jurisdiction to which they were transmitted. In some cases, we received cooperation from our foreign counterparts, and in others, we did not. In some cases, challenges were raised to the venue and jurisdiction for our action, and in other cases, questions were raised as to where the funds actually were located.

By way of example, one scenario encountered (in a simplified form) involved funds which had been wire transferred to an account in a bank which we believed was located in a particular foreign country. We filed out civil forfeiture complaint and requested assistance in freezing these funds from our foreign counterparts, pursuant to the 1988 Vienna Convention. As a result, the foreign officials interviewed employees of the bank and determined that the bank, as well as the account to which the funds had been sent, was actually located in another country. Therefore, pursuant to a mutual legal assistance treaty with the second country, we advised authorities that we had information concerning the transmission of drug proceeds to bank accounts in their country.

Since the laws of this country did not allow it to assist us in civil forfeiture cases, it opened its own investigation based upon the information we provided, and proceeded to freeze the bank accounts. Because this country only recognized criminal forfeiture and the defendants were not presently before the court in the jurisdiction, it was not clear whether the courts in this country could forfeit the money. Further, it appeared that the bank did not have a storefront facility in this jurisdiction and the assets securing the bank's obligation to pay its account-holders was not in the country; instead, it was claimed that the assets were in the U.S. correspondent bank account of the foreign bank in New York. The United States therefore amended its civil forfeiture complaint to reflect this change, but questions remain as to whether the District of Columbia is the proper jurisdiction for civil forfeiture of these funds.

This scenario illustrates the difficulties law enforcement faces in this area, and it should be noted that we are not always so fortunate to obtain the cooperation of both foreign governments. The difficulties are multiplied if we were dealing with non-cooperative bank secrecy jurisdictions.

In this regard, we would note that Recommendation 6 of your Report regarding the denial of correspondent accounts at U.S. banks for high-risk foreign banks would assist our anti-money laundering law enforcement efforts. We would be interested in working with your Subcommittee to draft appropriate provisions to address such issues. We must work to give our prosecutors the tools they need to trace, freeze and seize illicit proceeds from crime, no matter where the funds are located in the world.

Financial Action Task Force Initiative

We feel that there should be "no safe haven" for money that represents the proceeds of crime, and that we must continue to work on the international level to break down the obstacles and barriers that insulate, protect, and disguise the ill-gotten gains from detection.

In an effort to encourage other countries to strengthen their anti-money statutes and regulations, the Department of Justice's Criminal Division is working in multilateral fora to bolster coordinated worldwide enforcement efforts against financial crimes. We have been an active participant in the Financial Action Task Force's initiative on Non-Cooperative Countries and Territories. This program endeavors to identify the locations of the most prevalent money laundering activities in the world and the jurisdictions with the weakest anti-money laundering legal and regulatory framework. This multilateral effort has proven to be successful in focusing the world's attention on countries that have not kept up with the standards in money laundering enforcement and inspiring many of the named countries to address their shortcomings in this area. The Criminal Division also works extensively to provide assistance to countries seeking to improve their money laundering and asset forfeiture laws or enhance their anti-money laundering enforcement programs. We need the cooperation and assistance of our foreign counterparts to disrupt the flow of criminal proceeds around the globe and deprive criminal organizations of their ill-gotten gains.

Conclusion

Once again, Madam Chair, and Senator Levin, I commend you and your staff for focusing attention on this important issue and preparing this report. We look forward to working with you on solutions to the problems highlighted in the report.

President Moves Quickly on Judgeships

By NEIL A.
LEWIS
>ASHINGTON, March 10 ??? The Bush administration is moving with extraordinary swiftness to put its stamp on the federal courts, setting aside evenings in which more than 50 candidates have already been interviewed for judgeships, with an emphasis on filling vacancies on the federal appeals courts."This is a very real priority for us and we've been working pretty hard at it," said Alberto R. Gonzales, a former Texas judge who is the new White House counsel.
Mr. Gonzales heads a committee of about 15 people from the White House and the Justice Department who are screening lawyers for judgeships.The quickness with which officials are addressing the selection of judges is a revealing window into the priorities of the administration's lawyers. It is also in marked contrast to the eight years of the Clinton administration, in which the White House did not make judicial selection a major priority.Scholars and lawyers said that the Bush process appears to most resemble the 12 years

Republican rule under President Ronald Reagan and Mr. Bush's father in which there was a concerted effort to turn the courts rightward.Although the screening process is not yet fully in place, it has won strong plaudits from conservatives not only for the kinds of qualities it is seeking in candidates, but for the credentials of the senior staff members doing the screening.The lawyers under Mr. Gonzalez in the counsel's office who do much of the questioning of the candidates are part of a cadre of young lawyers who have a strong ideological commitment to conservative jurisprudence. They typically have collected similar credentials for entry in that elite group;
most have been law clerks for conservative judges and Supreme Court justices and are members of the Federalist Society, a conservative organization heavily involved in promoting its members through ideological networking.Some of Mr.
Gonzales' deputy counsels also have impeccable anti- Clinton credentials,
having worked for Kenneth W. Starr, the Whitewater special prosecutor.
Others were involved in pressing Mr. Bush's case in Florida during the post-Election Day dispute.For example, one of the six associate counsels,
Brett Kavanaugh, led Mr. Starr's investigation into the death of Vincent
Foster, the deputy White House counsel in the Clinton administration.
Mr.
Kavanaugh, who is 35, also wrote a large portion of Mr. Starr's report to Congress that resulted in Mr. Clinton's impeachment in the House. At least three of the lawyers involved in judicial selection worked on Congressional

Whitewater investigations.Another prominent conservative who will have a major role in selecting judicial candidates will be Viet Dinh, a Georgetown University law professor who has been nominated to be an assistant attorney general to head the Office of Policy Development.
In that capacity, Professor Dinh will probably be responsible for reviewing judicial candidates' writings and records after they are selected by Mr. Gonzales' committee, officials said.Mr. Gonzales said that the candidates are typically interviewed into the night when he has time, and that they are asked about their judicial philosophy. "We don't have any litmus-test questions," he said, meaning the kind that directly seek answers to how a person would vote on a given issue like abortion."The truth of the matter is that a judge's personal views of an issue is irrelevant or should be irrelevant if a judge does her job right,"

he said. "We ask them questions about their philosophy," Mr.
Gonzales said.
"We ask how they construe statutes, how do they resolve disputes and what do they believe is the appropriate role of judges." Mr.
Gonzales said that he and President Bush agree that "the role of judges should be fairly limited."
During the presidential campaign, Mr. Bush identified Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas as examples of his judicial ideal.Clint Bolick, the director of the Institute for Justice, a conservative policy organization in Washington, said that "Gonzales has put together a top-notch team of young lawyers who are very committed to conservative ideals."Prof. Michael J.
Gerhardt of William and Mary Law School, who is an authority on judicial selection, said that "for some of these people, these conservative lawyers,
the issue of who gets to be a federal judge is the only thing that matters."Professor Gerhardt, the author of "The Federal Appointment Process"
(Duke University, 2001), said that the screening of candidates will not depend so much on the answers given to general questions about philosophy but on other indicators "like the kinds of causes people have been involved with.
They have to have some record of supporting the ideology and membership in the Federalist
Society is one very strong indicator." One factor that may distinguish the Bush administration from that of Ronald Reagan and the elder George
Bush is that the Senate, which must confirm judges, is split 50-50 between Democrats and Republicans. The Republicans have an edge because

vice president can break any tie. So one possible reason for the haste in selecting new judges may be that the White House knows that Republicans could lose their majority at any time if a Republican senator should retire.Of the 862 federal judgeships, there are currently about 100 vacancies for President Bush to fill, with 29 of them on the appellate courts, the level just below
the Supreme Court. Of the 13 regional circuit courts, eight currently have majorities of judges appointed by Republican presidents, two have Democratic majorities and three have equal numbers.During the Clinton administration,

some Republican judges said that even though their circuits had unfilled slots, there was no need to name any new judges since they could handle their workload. Mr. Gonzales said that President Bush would, nonetheless, try to name new judges to fill those vacancies.

By NEIL A.
LEWIS
>ASHINGTON, March 10 ??? The Bush administration is moving with extraordinary swiftness to put its stamp on the federal courts, setting aside evenings in which more than 50 candidates have already been interviewed for judgeships, with an emphasis on filling vacancies on the federal appeals courts."This is a very real priority for us and we've been working pretty hard at it," said Alberto R. Gonzales, a former Texas judge who is the new White House counsel.

Mr. Gonzales heads a committee of about 15 people from the White House and the Justice Department who are screening lawyers for judgeships.The quickness with which officials are addressing the selection of judges is a revealing window into the priorities of the administration's lawyers. It is also in marked contrast to the eight years of the Clinton administration, in which the White House did not make judicial selection a major priority.Scholars and lawyers said that the Bush process appears to most resemble the 12 years

which
the screening process is not yet fully in place, it has won strong plaudits from conservatives not only for the kinds of qualities it is seeking in candidates, but for the credentials of the senior staff members doing the screening.The lawyers under Mr. Gonzalez in the counsel's office who do much of the questioning of the candidates are part of a cadre of young lawyers who have a strong ideological commitment
to conservative jurisprudence. They typically have collected similar credentials for entry in that elite group;
most have been law clerks for conservative judges and Supreme Court justices
and are members of the Federalist Society, a conservative organization heavily involved in promoting its members through ideological networking.Some of Mr.
Gonzales' deputy counsels also have impeccable anti- Clinton credentials,
having worked for Kenneth W. Starr, the Whitewater special prosecutor.
Others were involved in pressing Mr. Bush's case in Florida
during the post-Election Day dispute.For example, one of the six associate counsels,
Brett Kavanaugh, led Mr. Starr's investigation into the death of Vincent
Foster, the deputy White House counsel in the Clinton administration.
Mr.
Kavanaugh, who is 35, also wrote a large portion of Mr. Starr's report to Congress that resulted in Mr. Clinton's impeachment in the House. At least

Congressional
Whitewater investigations.Another prominent conservative
who will have a major role in selecting judicial candidates will be Viet Dinh, a Georgetown University law professor who has been nominated to be an assistant attorney

general to head the Office of Policy Development.
In that capacity, Professor
Dinh will probably be responsible for reviewing judicial candidates' writings
and records after they are selected by Mr. Gonzales' committee, officials said.Mr. Gonzales said that the candidates are typically interviewed into the night when he has
philosophy. "We don't have any litmus-test questions," he said, meaning the kind that directly seek answers to how a person would vote on a given issue like abortion."The truth of the matter is that a judge's personal views of an issue is irrelevant or should be irrelevant if a judge does her job right,"

he said. "We ask them questions about their philosophy," Mr.
Gonzales said.
"We ask how they construe statutes, how do they resolve disputes and what do
they believe is the appropriate role of judges." Mr.
Gonzales said that he
and President Bush agree that "the role of judges should be fairly limited."
During the presidential campaign, Mr. Bush
identified Justices Antonin Scalia
and Clarence Thomas as examples of his judicial ideal.Clint Bolick, the director of the Institute for Justice, a conservative policy organization in Washington, said that "Gonzales has
put together a top-notch team of young
conservative ideals."Prof. Michael J.
Gerhardt of William and Mary Law School, who is an authority on judicial selection, said that "for some of these people, these conservative lawyers,
the issue of who gets to be a federal judge is the only thing that
author of "The Federal Appointment Process"
(Duke University, 2001), said that the screening of candidates will not depend so much on the answers
given to general questions about philosophy but
on other indicators "like
the kinds of causes people have been involved with.
They have to have some record of supporting the ideology and membership in the Federalist
Society is one very strong indicator." One factor that may distinguish the Bush administration from that of Ronald Reagan and the elder George
Bush is that the Senate, which must confirm judges, is split 50-50 between Democrats and Republicans. The Republicans have an edge because

vice president can break any tie. So one possible reason for the haste in selecting new judges may be that the White House knows that Republicans could lose their majority at any time if a Republican senator should retire.Of the

862 federal judgeships, there are currently about 100 vacancies for President
Bush to fill, with 29 of them on the appellate courts, the level just below
the Supreme Court. Of the 13
regional circuit courts, eight currently have majorities of judges
appointed by Republican presidents, two have Democratic majorities and three have equal numbers.During the Clinton administration,
some Republican judges said that even though their circuits had unfilled

slots, there was no need to name any new judges since they could handle their workload. Mr. Gonzales said that President Bush would, nonetheless, try to

FYI:
The district courts for the Mariana Islands and for Guam have one judge each, who are appointed by the Pres. to ten-year terms. The Judge in the Marianas won't be up for re-appointment until 2008 (thus I don't think it needs to be assigned to anyone). I don't know when Judge Unpingco in Guam was appointed.

I just spoke with Paul Colburn at OLC about posting the photographs of White House staff on the intranet site. He said that it is not a problem. Even assuming that some of the departments that have access to the site would be covered by the Privacy Act, an exception exists with respect to information that employees of the government need to carry out their duties. Paul said that the website would fit this exception because employees need to be able to identify each other to carry out their duties.

Because the Federalist Society resignations are recent, coinciding with the beginning of employment here, I would not try to make this a point as a way to disassociate us from the Feds. Given that a large percentage of us have historically been active in that organization, I think it's far better to simply give that "accusation" a shrug of the shoulders. I, for one, would be prepared to defend the Federalist Society as an institution any time, anywhere. It's totally innocuous and salutary, and I don't think we should cede ground to the left by appearing to be at all embarrassed or concerned about it.

While you cannot possibly respond to every false statement in the press reports, you may want to (or at least have the press office do so) point out obvious whoppers to some of these reporters/writers. In my experience, this is somewhat efficacious when it is an actual factual error. For example, one falsehood gaining currency rapidly is that "several" members of this Office worked for Ken Starr's OIC. (See, e.g., Anthony Lewis' op-ed yesterday.) In fact, only one of us (me) did so.

Also, this may seem technical, but most of us resigned from the Federalist Society before starting work here and are not now members of the Society. (I know that Helgi, Bart, and I resigned.) Furthermore, many of us have been members of the ABA in the past.

Thought you two would enjoy this entry from a conservative Web site:

"The conservative facade of the new Bush administration continues to disintegrate in their head-long determination to placate a liberal media and Senate in the name of "bi-partisanship" and "unity"
Bush has just added to his White House staff of lawyers, the infamous Independent Council staff attorney, Brett Kavanaugh. Kavanaugh was one of the dark-side agents within Ken Starr s office who sabotaged the Vince Foster murder investigation. . . . So, now we have at least 3 suspected dark-side operators within the Bush team--Richard Armitage, C Boyden Gray and Brett Kavanaugh."

The following story is from the American Spectator.

"Fast Track

"One reason White House counsel Alberto Gonzales is moving so quickly to cut off the American Bar Association from review of Bush judicial nominees is White House concern that Bush will need to make at least two Supreme Court appointments in the next six months. "It could be as many as three," says a White House source.

"Within the past month, Gonzales and aides from the White House Counsel's

Office have met with Republican Senate leaders and asked them to vet a list of about 25 names of potential nominees to the high court.

"One name surprisingly missing was that of Sen. Orrin Hatch. 'I wouldn't read anything into that,' the source added.
'We know where the Senate would come down on that one. It's the other names we're curious about.'"

You each will receive a copy of the Underwood/Clement SG memo to the AG each week (including today). It is a weekly memo that describes the briefs and arguments of the SG's Office, as well as the previous week's SCt decisions involving the United States. I will do the short memo to Senior Staff that summarizes the important information from that memo, as well as describe any non-United States decisions by the Supreme Court that may nonetheless be of interest to the Senior Staff. It is obviously important that my short memo be quite consistent in viewpoint with the SG's memo and also obviously important that the SG's memo to us precede our memo to senior staff. The point of this is obviously not for the White House to become regularly involved in SG decisionmaking, but rather to keep the Senior Staff and thus the President apprised of the work of the SG's office and the Supreme Court.

On occasions where it is possible that the President/White House should comment on a decision immediately (rather than just DOJ), I will inform the Judge immediately. A good example is the Good News case. Presidents in the past have done this on relatively rare occasions.

Bush Ends ABA's Role With Justices

by LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The head of the American Bar Association says President Bush's decision to end the group's half-century role in vetting prospective federal judges may mean more politics in the review process.

The White House announced Thursday it no longer will give the ABA advance word on names under consideration and first crack at reviewing prospective nominees' qualifications. Instead, the nation's largest lawyers' group will have to do its research after nominations become public, as do other organizations.

''We are concerned that politics may be taking the place of professionalism in the review,'' ABA President Martha Barnett said at a news conference. She said a committee of ABA lawyers will continue to rate nominees' qualifications, but she added that doing so after the names become public could prove confrontational.

Bush signed off on the change in a meeting with White House Counsel Al Gonzales. Gonzales' letter informing Barnett of the decision took a rap at the ABA's advocacy work on policy, which includes support for abortion rights and a call for a death penalty moratorium.

''The question is whether the ABA should play a unique, quasi-official role and thereby have its voice heard before and above all others,'' Gonzales wrote. ''We do not think that kind of preferential arrangement is either appropriate or fair.''

He said it would be particularly inappropriate, given that the ABA ''takes public positions on divisive political, legal and social issues that come before the courts.''

Republican officials said the move was driven largely by conservatives, especially on Capitol Hill, still bitter about the failure of President Reagan's nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court. Many conservatives see the ABA as liberal-leaning and blame its mixed review of Bork's qualifications for his rejection by the Senate.

The ABA began reviewing prospective judicial nominees at President Eisenhower's request in 1953. The reviews are conducted by a panel of lawyers isolated from the organization's political actions, Barnett said.

In a written statement, Barnett said any idea that the ABA panel is biased against Republican nominees is false. Of about 2,000 judicial nominees since 1960, she said 26 were found ''not qualified'' -- all but three of those nominated by Democratic presidents.

Gonzales promised a ''full vetting'' of judicial prospects within the administration and said the White House would not seek to substitute another, more conservative outside research group for the bar association.

Conservatives were pleased. ''This group cannot be doggedly partisan on issues and expect to be considered nonpartisan on judicial candidate evaluations,'' said House Judiciary Chairman F.
James Sensenbrenner Jr.,
R-Wis.

Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the Judiciary Committee's ranking Democrat, and committee member Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said they will still seek ABA qualification checks. Schumer said the White House was moving ''to substitute ideology for quality'' in the selection of judges.

Thomas Jipping, who monitors judicial selections for a conservative

Washington think tank, the Free Congress Foundation, said the Bush administration's move was ''long overdue.''

''The only reason ever offered on why they should have this special veto power is that they are nonpolitical. That hasn't been the case for 20 years,'' Jipping said.

Nan Aron of the liberal Alliance for Justice said the move was ''tantamount to a declaration of war on the judiciary. They're saying, 'we want nothing to come between our ultraconservative allies and a seat on the judiciary.'''

Subject: District court vacancy in West Virginia

I was assigned the State of West Virginia, but I see no district court vacancy or future district court vacancy on any of our lists. Clue, anyone?

I have advised him not to be involved in any of this, and also to let me know who is doing this. I will call them and tell them that this is totally inappropriate.

Staff from the Senatorial Committee asked me to work with them to enhance their donor list with the coal related folks we cultivated during the campaign. While I am all for helping to elect more GOP senators, I am wary of doing anything that may result in turning off our core group in terms of political involvement and donations. It is apparent these folks (Senatorial) are not in tune with the issues this group feels is important. I am also concerned that their standard MO for soliciting donations, which works with the "inside the beltway" corporate energy guys, will not work and may, in fact, hurt us when we go back to them for our needs. Their request, however, did make me think about how we continue to include (and expand) this group for policy input and future financial support.

My gut tells me not to give up our strategy and contacts for the energy group. I am happy to engage in a vague fashion but, unless I hear otherwise from you, I'm not giving them a roadmap. Please advise.

Secondly, let's confer on the issue of keeping our energy group together and keeping them engaged in a meaningful fashion - for both policy development and financial support (Duncan should probably be in on this).

Perhaps you guys are already on top of this - if so, sorry to take up your time. Otherwise, we need to find time to address this.

regards,

McCutch

On the meeting, I am available anytime this week except on Wednesday from roughly 3:30 - 5:00 p.m. and on Friday from 12:30 - 2:30 p.m. I think Brett should join us -- since he is the office expert on designating things political versus official.

On the billing issue, the Judge has recommended a policy that would allow you pay the bills directly from the travel funds, unless the employee received a full per diem on the day of the travel. If the employee received a per diem to cover meals, he or she must pay for the meals eaten on Air Force One. So for past bills, where per diems were already given, staff member need to pay. But going forward, the recommended policy would allow you to institute a procedure whereby staff members receive a reduced per diem and then are not required to pay for meals on AFO.

Last I recall, we were trying to get a meeting together on this subject and some related matters. Can we try again for this week? I think the attendees were you, me, Jim Daniel with FMD and possibly Brett.

Also - think we have touched on this issue - I have the Airlift Ops bills for food on Air Force One. Are we still determining whether the staff bill can be paid for by Travel funds, or do the individuals have to reimburse directly. FMDs recommendation is that it may be paid from Travel Funds. Any thoughts?

thanks. vbm

~~Discussion for Event Procedure & Policy~~Event Designations and Miscellaneous Travel Issues

Formatted

Event Designation
~~General Overview~~

Event designations will support how event and travel costs are allocated for payment. The designation must be reflected in the trip summaries prepared after each event for appropriate payment of costs. To maintain uniformity in the designation of events, objective criteria should be applied in a designation decision. ~~The purpose or the subject matter of an event should always be the deciding factor for designating whether an event is official, political or personal. Additionally, a determination should always be made prior to the event on the designation of the event. A single individual (Scheduler) should be responsible for making the determination.~~ The designation should be~~-~~ decided prior to the event and listed on the Presidential Scheduling Proposal or APA. ~~stated on the Approved Presidential Activity (APA) document.~~ Events that involve travel are 100% official, 100% political or a mixture of both or "mixed" trips. Below are locations where event designations will need to be made.
~~(Please see Policy Matters after this section on criteria involving making the designation of an event.)~~

~~Below please find several scenarios where the designation of an event involving the President should be addressed:~~

~~Events Involving Travel: Events that involve travel are either 100% official, 100% political or a mixture of both ("mixed" travel.) (Please see Travel Matters for more information.)~~

Residence: Events within the Residence are either 100% official, political or personal. There are no mixed events in the Residence. (The determination of how events are designated in the Residence involves some further discussion. ~~Please see Policy Matters following this section~~.)

The 18 acre complex: Events within the 18 acre complex are either 100% official or political. There are no mixed events on the complex.

Local Event (DC): Local events are either 100% official or political. Generally, the Host of the event absorbs minor costs. There are no mixed local events.

Camp David: (need to think through issues) (travel issue for staff RON)

Formatted

The Ranch: (need to think through issues)

Formatted

Out-of Town: These events involve travel and may be either official, political

Formatted

~~Policy Matters~~Criteria

Criteria should be established for determining an event designation. ~~The~~General criteria should be applied to determine ~~re are several policy matters that need to be discussed that will affect how~~whether an event is to be designated official, political, mixed ~~-~~or personal. (What if the event is too close to call? Always err on the non-official side) ~~events are designated.~~

~~Criteria: General guidance and criteria should be established for determining an event designation.~~

Official Event – (Criteria for determining an official event)

Political Event – (Criteria for determining political event)

- Purpose of the Event
- Invitees
- Other

~~For discussion: Invitation lists should play a part in the designation. Additionally, the subject matter or purpose of the event should play a part. What if the event is too close to call? Always err on the non-official side? Other criteria in making a determination?~~

Residence: (special explanation and basic examples if above criteria is not broad enough)~~It needs to be determined how the event designations are made in the Residence.~~

~~For example: If the President moves a lunch from the West Wing to the Residence, does the designation of the event change. Should the determination be guided by who cooks the meal?~~ ~~Commitment~~ For example: If the President moves a lunch from the West Wing to the Residence, does the designation of the event change. Should the determination be guided by who cooks the meal?

Additionally, should the invitation list play a part in the designation?

Hosting Letters: Issued by Scheduling and outlines detail of an event and who will be paying. Important to review for mixed trips. ~~(need to review)~~

Hosting issues: Official (WHO or other government agency) vs. political (RNC or other political entity). Are there events where a non-profit or for-profit entity may host an event?

Travel Matters

O Based on those designations a trip may be ~~A determination is made prior to a trip on the trip designation;~~ official, political or mixed.

~~100% Official Trips:~~ Official trips are coordinated by the Travel Office, Advance Office and OA Financial Management Division (FMD). The Hosting Letter prepared by the Scheduling office will determine who pays for the costs associated with the trip. ~~… (how much detail do we want here?)~~

~~100% Political Trips:~~ Political ~~trips~~ trips are paid for by the event sponsor. ~~.~~ A separate document will outline that process.

"Mixed" Trips: ~~Mixed trips are handled differently depending on whether or not~~ Until the President is a candidate for office, the costs for mixed travel will be allocated between political and official accounts on an "Pro-Rata" basis. The costs allocated to the political account will be the incremental costs involved in attending the political event(s).

~~For the purpose of this discussion, the President is not a candidate and costs associated with a mixed trip are calculated on an incremental basis.~~

For example: If there are three (3) events: ~~and~~ two (2) are official and one (1) is political, costs of the political portion are the costs that attending the event added to the otherwise official trip. The following examples illustrate this point:

1) If the political event was a drop by a fundraiser on the way to the airport after an official visit then the political events cost would be only that additional costs, which would likely be minimal.

~~1)~~2) If the political event is in a separate city or requires an otherwise unnecessary overnight, the costs allocated to the political account would increase. ~~calculated based on the incremental cost increase to the event. There are numerous scenarios in addressing how costs are allocated on an incremental basis. The primary cost allocation will involve advance staff hotel and per diem.~~

Expense Reimbursement Account for Travel: (Same as Residence account. GAO review. Procedure needs explanation.)

Paid Meals on Air Force One and Staff Holding Rooms: Current policy for ~~M~~meals on Air Force One ~~are currently being billed directly to individuals~~is that individuals will be billed for the prorated cost of the lunch. FMD recommends that meal costs for Air Force One and staff holding areas be paid for directly from the WHO travel budget. This ~~has the potential to save~~ will be a more efficient use of travel funds as ~~well, in that overall~~ this direct bill is expected to cost less than aggregate per diem costs ~~would be more expensive than actual food costs~~.

~~Reduced~~ Incremental Per Diem for Staff on Manifest: A supplemental per diem rate will be allocated to staff when meals on Air Force One and staff holding areas are not sufficient. This would generally apply to an overnight trip. ~~If it is determined that meals will be paid for from the travel budget,~~ The ~~a reduced~~ per diem rate would be less than the current per diem and should ~~be determined for~~ include all staff who are ~~will be~~ on the manifest. It is recommended that a reduced per diem rate be determined prior to each trip.

Classification of Official Travelers: Need to look at current list and policy (below) and determine if it should be changed. Currently, the following positions are considered always official when accompanying the President or First Lady or Vice President regardless of the nature of the trip (official, political or mixed)

Formatted

Senior Advisor (or substitute)
Personal Aide to the President (or Vice President) Personal Aide to the First Lady President's Secretary (or Vice President's Secretary) Doctor
Photographer
National Security Advisor (or substitute)
Director, White House Military Office (or substitute)
All military and other personnel subject to those Hatch Act restrictions that prohibit most participation in political activity.
United States Secret Service Personnel

Other officials are considered to be on official duty regardless of the nature of the President or Vice President's activities if it is not determined by the Senior Advisor, the President's counsel or the Vice President's counsel before that trip that:

1) the official is traveling for the sole purpose of providing:

   a) clerical, logistical and administrative support, or
   b) staff assistance in the management of paperwork and the records of decisions, or
   c) consultation and guidance necessary solely for the transaction of government business, and

2) the official will not engage in any political activity during the travel. However, mere presence at a political event will not be considered "engaging in political activity" as long as the official's attendance is necessary to perform one or more of the official functions enumerated above.

Policies regarding First Lady Travel: (any issues here?) Official vs. unofficial travel

Formatted

Other issues to consider:

Personal Guests: Need policy?

Formatted

Political Travelers: Need policy? Political Affairs staff (and others?) should always be political when on political or mixed trips

The RNC can pay for Mrs. Abraham to travel to a political event if the RNC approves that expense. Same rule with advance people. This strikes me as not a legal question, but as an RNC policy question.

Need some guidance from you:
In the past the RNC has paid for advance guys to go ahead of the Secretary on political events. Basically I understand that this is not the case. Can you let me know? Mrs. Abraham is very interested in traveling with Abraham and I am not sure how that will be paid for. Can you help?

Introduction

This statement discusses issues of tax-exempt status, private foundation classification, and disclosure of contributors raised by organizations that support presidential archival depositories. Generally, these presidential library foundations raise funds to construct and endow a library to hold the papers of a former President and make them available to researchers and the general public. On completion, the presidential library foundation conveys the facility and its endowment to the federal government. The presidential library foundation, however, may continue to raise funds to construct and maintain facilities and conduct educational programs related to the library.

Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code

In general, presidential library foundations would qualify for recognition of exemption under § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code as educational organizations. They also may qualify as "charitable" within the meaning of § 501(c)(3) because they lessen the burdens of government.

An organization is educational if it engages in (1) instruction or training of the individual for the purpose of improving or developing his capabilities, or (2) instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community. Treasury Regulation §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3)(i). The second category covers a broad range of institutions, including libraries. Several precedents under § 501(c)(3) of the Code (or its predecessor) have held that an organization operating a library qualified for exemption. In United States v. Proprietors of Social Law Library, 102 F.2d 481 (1st Cir. 1939), the court held a law library limited to dues-paying members exempt under section 101(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939. In Revenue Ruling (Rev. Rul.) 75-196, 1975-1 C.B. 155, the Internal Revenue Service ruled that a law library whose rules limited access and use to members, or their designees, of a local bar association qualified for exemption. In Forest Press, Inc. v. Commissioner, 22 T.C. 265 (1954), the Tax Court held an organization engaged in developing and publishing the Dewey Decimal System exempt as an educational organization. Rev. Rul. 81-29, 1981-1 C.B. 329, recognized as exempt an organization that operated a computer network to facilitate the exchange of bibliographic information among member libraries, some of which were not tax-exempt.

Presidential library foundations can also qualify as charitable organizations under § 501(c)(3) of the Code because they lessen the burdens of government. Section 501(c)(3) uses the term "charitable" in its generally accepted legal sense, which includes lessening the burdens of government. Treasury Regulation §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2). Rev. Rul. 85-2, 1985-1 C.B. 178, describes a two-step analysis to determine if an organization is lessening the burdens of government. First, there must be an objective manifestation by the government that it considers the activity part of its burden. Second, the organization must show that its activities actually lessen the government's burden. Presidential library foundations satisfy both parts of the test. The Presidential Libraries Acts of 1955 and 1968 manifest that the federal Government considers maintenance of these archives to be its burden (see, especially, 44 U.S.C. 2112). The activities of presidential library foundations alleviate this burden.

Foundation Classification

A presidential library foundation exempt under § 501(c)(3) that receives contributions from a broad number of sources should also qualify as "other than a private foundation" based on the source and amount of its financial support. Private foundations, which are supported by contributions from a limited number of individuals, such as a single family, and by investment income rather than public support or income from activities that further exempt purposes, are subject to different disclosure rules and strict rules enforced by excise taxes. (The word "Foundation" in an organization's name does not indicate that the organization is a "private foundation" for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code.) Normally, a presidential library foundation, like most § 501(c)(3) organizations that expect to receive public support, applies for an advance determination under §§ 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi) that it would not be a private foundation. As with most applicants for exemption under § 501(c)(3), the advance determination would be based on projections that it would receive substantial support in the form of contributions from publicly supported organizations, from a governmental unit, or from the general public. To receive a final determination under §§ 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi), at the end of a five-year period the organization must submit a financial support schedule demonstrating that during that period it received sufficient public support from gifts, grants, and contributions.

Publicity of Contributor Information Filed by Exempt Organizations

Section 6104 of the Code, in an exception to the general rule that returns and return information are confidential, specifically authorizes public disclosure of information on any exempt organization's application for recognition of exemption and annual information returns. However, § 6104(b) specifically provides that

"[N]othing in this subsection shall authorize the [Internal Revenue Service] to disclose the name or address of any contributor to any organization or trust (other than a private foundation, as defined in section 509(a)) or a political organization exempt from taxation under section 527 which is required to furnish such information." Because presidential library foundations normally qualify as "other than a private foundation," the names and addresses of contributors may not be disclosed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Section 6104(d) of the Code requires exempt organizations to make available their annual information returns and application materials for public inspection. However, § 6104(d)(3) provides that organizations that are not private foundations need not disclose the names and addresses of any of their contributors.

Generally, these presidential library foundations raise funds to construct and endow a library to hold the papers of a former President and make them available to researchers and the general public. On completion, the presidential library foundation conveys the facility and its endowment to the federal government. The presidential library foundation, however, may continue to raise funds to construct and maintain facilities and conduct educational programs related to the library.

Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code

In general, presidential library foundations would qualify for recognition of exemption under § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code as educational organizations. They also may qualify as "charitable" within the meaning of § 501(c)(3) because they lessen the burdens of government.

An organization is educational if it engages in (1) instruction or training of the individual for the purpose of improving or developing his capabilities, or (2) instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community. Treasury Regulation §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3)(i). The second category covers a broad range of institutions, including libraries. Several precedents under § 501(c)(3) of the Code (or its predecessor) have held that an organization operating a library qualified for exemption. In United States v. Proprietors of Social Law Library, 102 F.2d 481 (1st Cir. 1939), the court held a law library limited to dues-paying members exempt under section 101(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939. In Revenue Ruling (Rev. Rul.) 75-196, 1975-1 C.B. 155, the Internal Revenue Service ruled that a law library whose rules limited access and use to members, or their designees, of a local bar association qualified for exemption. In Forest Press, Inc. v. Commissioner, 22 T.C. 265 (1954), the Tax Court held an organization engaged in developing and publishing the Dewey Decimal System exempt as an educational organization. Rev. Rul. 81-29, 1981-1 C.B. 329, recognized as exempt an organization that operated a computer

Presidential library foundations can also qualify as charitable organizations under § 501(c)(3) of the Code because they lessen the burdens of government. Section 501(c)(3) uses the term "charitable" in its generally accepted legal sense, which includes lessening the burdens of government. Treasury Regulation §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2). Rev. Rul. 85-2, 1985-1 C.B. 178, describes a two-step analysis to determine if an organization is lessening the burdens of government. First, there must be an objective manifestation by the government that it considers the activity part of its burden. Second, the organization must show that its activities actually lessen the government's burden. Presidential library foundations satisfy both parts of the test. The Presidential Libraries Acts of 1955 and 1968 manifest that the federal Government considers maintenance of these archives to be its burden (see, especially, 44 U.S.C. 2112). The activities of presidential library foundations alleviate this burden.

Foundation Classification

A presidential library foundation exempt under § 501(c)(3) that receives contributions from a broad number of sources should also qualify as "other than a private foundation" based on the source and amount of its financial support. Private foundations, which are supported by contributions from a limited number of individuals, such as a single family, and by investment income rather than public support or income from activities that further exempt purposes, are subject to different disclosure rules and strict rules enforced by excise taxes. (The word "Foundation" in an organization's name does not indicate that the organization is a "private foundation" for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code.) Normally, a presidential library foundation, like most § 501(c)(3) organizations that expect to receive public support, applies for an advance determination under §§ 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi) that it would not be a private foundation. As with most applicants for exemption under § 501(c)(3), the advance determination would be based on projections that it would receive substantial support in the form of contributions from publicly supported organizations, from a governmental unit, or from the general public. To receive a final determination under §§ 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi), at the end of a five-year period the organization must submit a financial support schedule demonstrating that during that period it received sufficient public support from gifts, grants, and contributions.

Section 6104 of the Code, in an exception to the general rule that returns and return information are confidential, specifically authorizes public disclosure of information on any exempt organization's application for recognition of exemption and annual information returns. However, § 6104(b) specifically provides that

"[N]othing in this subsection shall authorize the [Internal Revenue Service] to disclose the name or address of any contributor to any organization or trust (other than a private foundation, as defined in section 509(a)) or a political organization exempt from taxation under section 527 which is required to furnish such information." Because presidential library foundations normally qualify as "other than a private foundation," the names and addresses of contributors may not be disclosed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Section 6104(d) of the Code requires exempt organizations to make available their annual information returns and application materials for public inspection. However, § 6104(d)(3) provides that organizations that are not private foundations need not disclose the names and addresses of any of their contributors.

Libby, a guy named Joseph Whitsitt called to check on an old problem he has from the Nixon era. It has something to do with the Treasury dept. and treasury bills and the request for an executive order and something else I did not understand.

He says he has called the Justice Dept., the Treasury Dept. and has spoken with our DPC, and probably someone in legal. Can you see if someone would call him or has spoken to him about this. I told him that we were not able to help him but he is going to keep calling until we are able to give him a legal reason we cannot intervene.

Here is his info.

If there is nothing to do that is fine. I just wanted to see if there was an explanation for this guy.

The Erlichs may have hoped to build their dream home and live happily ever after, but there is a reason that tag line belongs only in fairy tales. Building a house may turn out to be a stress-freee project; it is more likely to the stuff of urban legends*the cause of bankruptcy, martial dissolution, hypertension and fleeting fantasies ranging from homicide to suicide. . . .

The available damages for defective construction are limited to the cost of repairing the home, including lost use or relocation expenses, or the diminution in value. The Erlichs received more than $ 400,000 in traditional contract damages to correct the defects in their home. While their distress was undoubtedly real and serious, we conclude the balance of policy considerations--the potential for significant increases in liability in amounts disproportionate to culpability, the court's inability to formulate appropriate limits on the availability of claims, and the magnitude of the impact on stability and predictability in commercial affairs--counsel against expanding contract damages to include mental distress claims in negligent construction cases.

Cancel the request. The Energy Policy legal counsel is reviewing the documents now -- they've been working on this for a while so they feel comfortable telling us what to do.
Unless you want to review the documents as well, we'll leave it in their hands.
thank you Brett -

Brett:
Below is a meeting that will take place on Wednesday here in the OEOB with 60-100 coal leaders from across the country.
I left a packet of material on your chair for your review -- our concern centers around what kind of information we may distribute to them.
Let us know your thoughts?
thanks very much Brett -

COAL LEADERS MEETING: PROGRAM

Emcee: Deputy Director of White House Political Affairs Matt Schlapp - intro and welcome (2 minutes)

Program:
1) Secretary of Energy Spence Abraham: Opening Remarks (10 minutes)
- Administration sees coal as an important part of a balanced national energy policy
- this priority is reflected in the budget
- also in the Research and Development tax grant
- Clean coal is an important part of making this priority into a reality
- and ending regulatory uncertainty is a second top priority to this end

2) Energy Council Director Andrew Lunquist: Energy Council overview (10 minutes)
- the nation is facing an energy crisis due to years of neglect
- action needs to be taken now
- President Bush is providing that leadership through the principles of his energy plan (lay out principles)

3) National Economic Council Deputy Director Robert McNally : Energy Economics (8 minutes)
- the coal economy is extremely important to many regions of the country
- the President's energy plan supports that coal economy (specific examples)
- The President's plan therefore supports the American economy (broader economic themes)

4) Comments, Questions, and Answers (15 minutes)
- Lundquist/McNally to take comments/questions for 15-20 minutes

5) Deputy Director of White House Political Affairs Matt Schlapp: Energy Politics and Action Items (8 minutes)
- The President's plan will succeed with support from the leaders in this room
- here's how you can help (op-ed letters, talking to local reporters, informing constituents)

END. Total Program (approx. 55 minutes).

The White House is inviting 100-150 Energy Leaders for a briefing on Energy Policy on April 25, 2001 from 4:00pm - 5:00pm in Room 450 of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building .

The agenda is:
1) Secretary of Energy Spence Abraham: Welcome and Opening Remarks
2) Energy Council Director Andrew Lunquist: Energy Policy
3) National Economic Council Deputy Director Robert McNally : Energy Economics
4) Deputy Director of White House Political Affairs Matt Schlapp: Energy Politics and Action Items

Invitees should include leaders in the Energy field we have discussed.

Invitees should be instructed to arrive at the Pennslyvania Avenue entrance of the EEOB at 3:30pm. They will be met by White House staff stationed at that entrance to guide them to the event, where they will receive talking points and a packet of information material to be reviewed by the speakers.

Attached, please find the confirmation document you should use in inviting leaders to the event. The document should be returned to Michael Napolitano on April 23rd at michael_j._napolitano@who.eop.gov, with all information completed and including only confirmed attendees.

Thanks.

the VP Office was pretty intent on including some form of language to tell the coal leaders:
"The National Energy Policy Development Group has not yet finished their study and will not yet release their work and is restricted from doing so by regulatory procedures." The worry being that we need to make it clear to these folks that this is NOT a meeting wherein they are being asked to affect/change the upcoming policy - especially considering all the open-meetings laws, etc., that are being levelled against the group now.
please let me know your thoughts at you earliest convenience -
thanks -

Subject: Political activity policy issue

The OPM regulations specifically allow PAS and White House officials to hold partisan political meetings or political receptions -- so long as they are not fundraisers -- in government offices or government conference rooms. This is what Secretary Thompson did, and it is perfectly permissible under the law.

Ken Mehlman and I plan to meet with various people from the agencies next week to give them additional guidance and really to make sure everyone understands what the rules are. Question: Do we want to adopt a policy that, at least ordinarily, government property should not be used to host events or meetings that are explicitly designed to host to entertain or speak to political contributors? On the one hand, this is discrimination against those who contribute, which seems wrong. On the other hand, some critics would argue that the reason such people obtain access in the first place is the fact of the contribution. On this theory, of course, the meeting itself is the problem, not its location. But there is substantial political and appearance problems caused by the location (hence, White House coffee criticisms) and this kind of policy would avoid such criticism.

We should discuss, perhaps with Ken.

We should discuss.

President Bush seized the initiative in a battle over judgeships Wednesday by very publicly naming a group of 11 for federal vacancies, choosing mostly conservative, respected lawyers and balancing them with two former Clinton nominees.

Keenly aware that this first batch of nominees would draw the most scrutiny, especially after a presidential campaign in which the subject arose regularly, the White House skirted
the more controversial, ideologically driven picks that may come later.

In a splashy ceremony in the White House East Room, Bush sought to define his candidates before they could be defined by his critics. The 11 nominees stood on a small three-level riser, a youthful group creating a tableau of racial and gender diversity.
Such ceremonies are traditionally reserved for nominees to the U.S.
Supreme Court.

Animosity over the judicial selection process has been brewing for weeks in the evenly divided Senate, which must confirm Bush's choices, and Bush appealed Wednesday for a

truce.

"I urge senators of both parties to rise above the bitterness of the past, to provide a fair hearing and a prompt vote on every nominee," Bush said.

All of Bush's nominees are slated to be appeals court judges, who are far more influential than district, or lower, court judges and whose decisions can be reversed only by the Supreme Court.
Of 179 appeals courts seats, 31 stand vacant, and 15 of these are classified as "judicial emergencies" by the federal judiciary as a result of high caseloads and the length of the vacancy.

Democrats, who saw Republicans block many of President Bill Clinton's appointees, are not so eager as Bush to begin whisking judges through the Senate. One Clinton nominee in Michigan, for instance, waited for a Senate hearing for four years, and Democrats are skeptical of Republicans' newfound insistence on quick confirmation.

"I think we should have a real conversation between the Senate and the president on this," said University of Chicago law professor Cass Sunstein. "The Republicans played such an unbelievably and inappropriately aggressive role in blocking President Clinton's mostly centrist appointments that it would be unfair for the Democrats not to give some scrutiny to all this."

Democratic warnings

Throughout the presidential campaign, Democrats warned that if Bush were elected he would push the courts irrevocably to the right, frequently invoking the names of conservative Supreme Court Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas in a negative light. Bush praised Scalia and Thomas during the campaign as embodiments of judicial restraint.

In a sign of what the nominees may expect, a liberal group called Alliance for Justice delivered a letter to each Senate office Wednesday signed by nearly 200 law professors urging senators to scrutinize each would-be judge.

But this first group of nominees may present a challenge for liberal activists. The White House, clearly paying attention to grumbling on the left about Bush's potential choices for judgeships, pared down its expected batch of 40 nominees to 11, creating a smaller, more elusive target.

As with his Cabinet, Bush has chosen a largely conservative group but a diverse one, including two women, two African-Americans and a Hispanic. Bush also nominated two Democrats.

One of these is Roger Gregory, whom Clinton placed on the bench on an interim basis, making him the first African-American on the U.S. Appeals Court in Richmond. His nomination was

a Clinton appointee in New York.

Georgetown University professor Mark Tushnet said Bush has chosen shrewdly. "These are not stupid people," Tushnet said of the Bush administration. "It's a pretty good package."

The challenge facing liberal activists is illustrated by the nomination of Michael McConnell, who graduated from the University of Chicago Law School, taught there for 12 years, and now is a professor at the University of Utah. He was nominated to serve on the U.S. Appeals Court in Denver.

McConnell is a staunch conservative known for challenging the notion of the wall between church and state, angering liberals. "This nomination represents a terrible assault on American freedom by the Bush administration," Barry Lynn, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State, said Wednesday.

But McConnell's colleagues, of whatever political persuasion, have little but praise for him.

"I think the federal judiciary is in some danger of becoming a bunch of right-wing activists, but having said that, I think McConnell is an absolutely outstanding choice and deserves everyone's support," said Sunstein, who taught with him at the University of Chicago. "He is very open-minded."

Rehnquist clerk

Another example is John Roberts, a Washington lawyer whom Bush wants to put on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, second only to the Supreme Court in influence. Roberts has clerked for Chief Justice William Rehnquist, served in the Justice Department under Bush's father and has been active in conservative circles.

That did not stop E. Lawrence Barcella, a prominent Washington lawyer who is generally liberal, from praising him. "He's a very smart guy," Barcella said. "He certainly has a tremendous amount of experience. I'm not sure he's as bedrock conservative as some of the others."

Such sentiment does not mean activists will not do their utmost to knock off Bush's appointees. Torpedoing opponents' judicial nominees has become part of Washington's eternal political war, because federal judges serve for life.

Liberal groups scrambled Wednesday to research the backgrounds of the nominees. "With a few exceptions, it's a very conservative group that we fear is out of step on issues about which we think there is broad consensus in this country," said Marcia Kuntz, legislative director of the Alliance for Justice.

Some of the nominees were already emerging as potential targets, including

Terrence
Boyle, a former aide to Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.).

Boyle, who now sits as federal judge in North Carolina, has issued two controversial redistricting decisions that were overturned by the Supreme Court.

But Bush appeared to put Democrats on the defensive by choosing candidates whose personal ethics and professional qualifications are hard to challenge.

"The qualifications of these candidates are so strong that it leaves liberal interest groups with only ideology as a basis of opposition," said Clint Bolick, vice president of the conservative Institute for Justice.

This is to document Counsel's advice with respect to the National Federation of Republican Women (NFRW) event that is scheduled for today and that you just discussed with me.

The NFRW's Regents group is coming to the White House Residence today to meet with Mrs. Bush. The NFRW's invitation to the event required the members of the Regents to contribute $300 simply to come to this event. The invitations also indicated that one could join the Regents for $1000, pay the extra $300 as well, and thereby attend the event. As such, the event is in the nature of a fundraiser. A political group's fundraiser cannot occur on government office property, and any sort of fundraiser (political or otherwise) on any kind of federal government property (office or otherwise) triggers a host of appearance concerns.

Because today's event is in the Residence, there are no legal problems with today's event, but there are serious appearance problems. We therefore request that you follow one of two options.

First, the event may be held in the Residence so long as (i) each person who paid the $300 for the event is promptly reimbursed the $300 by NFRW and (ii) each person in attendance today who joined the Regents after the time this invitation was sent out is reimbursed an additional $1000 by NFRW. We should ensure that NFRW agree to these requirements in advance and documents its future compliance with these requirements. If it agrees, then this event will be in the nature of a typical meeting or party where an outside group comes to the White House Residence. As such, the event should pose no particular legal or appearance concerns.

Second, and alternatively, the event as currently structured may be held at a site off government property and outside the White House.

If you have further questions, please contact me or Moose Cobb.

I would delete second paragraph (everything after the first sentence of it at least) and simply refer him to Dept of Education, not to Member of Congress. I will look at next draft.

Dear Ms. Fox:

Thank you very much for your letter. Please accept my apologies for the delay in my response. It sounds as if you have had a difficult time in recent years. Please know that President Bush is dedicated to doing everything he can to raise the future prospects and standard of living for all Americans.

I understand your concerns and the challenges you are facing. Without complete information however, it is difficult for me to address the details of your specific situation. In addition, there are restrictions on me prohibiting me from making inquiries on behalf of an individual before a federal agency. However, I would recommend that you alert your Member of Congress or U.S. Senator about your concerns regarding the Department of Education. They may be able to assist you.

Sincerely,

Lawrence B. Lindsey

Sorry for the delay on this. You asked about how to respond to Christie Fox. I think a standard response letter from you or from correspondence is appropriate. There is not much else to do with something like that. Thanks and please follow up with any additional questions.

Dear Ms. Fox:

Thank you very much for your letter. Please accept my apologies for the delay in my response. It sounds as if you have had a difficult time in recent years. Please know that President Bush is dedicated to doing everything he can to raise the future prospects and standard of living for all Americans.

I understand your concerns and the challenges you are facing. You may wish to contact Secretary Paige at the Department of Education. His office will undoubtedly be able to refer you to the appropriate people who can assist you directly.

Sincerely,

Lawrence B. Lindsey
Assistant to the President for Economic Policy

Dear Ms. Fox:

Thank you very much for your letter. Please accept my apologies for the delay in my response. It sounds as if you have had a difficult time in recent years. Please know that President Bush is dedicated to doing everything he can to raise the future prospects and standard of living for all Americans.

I understand your concerns and the challenges you are facing. Without complete information however, it is difficult for me to address the details of your specific situation. In addition, there are restrictions on me prohibiting me from making inquiries on behalf of an individual before a federal agency. However, I would recommend that you alert your Member of Congress or U.S. Senator about your concerns regarding the Department of Education. They may be able to assist you.

Sincerely,

Lawrence B. Lindsey
Assistant to the President for Economic Policy

SECTION: Editorial; Pg. 12; ZONE: N

LENGTH: 541 words

BODY:
Judicial nominations have been a prime partisan and ideological battleground at least since 1987, when President Reagan's selection of Robert Bork for the Supreme Court fell victim to a barrage of fire from liberals. As the courts have played an increasingly large role in settling policy disputes, both Republicans and Democrats have come to see judicial appointments as just another form of political warfare.

George W. Bush wants to de-escalate the fighting, as he made clear with his first set of judicial nominations last week. Urging a "return of civility and dignity to the confirmation process," he asked Democrats to "rise above the bitterness of the past" and vote promptly on his choices.

He also gave them the chance to meet him halfway. The slate of 11

appellate court nominations suggests an effort not only to satisfy Republicans in Congress but to mollify
Democrats who figured his ideal judge would fall well to the right of Roy Bean--even though Bush's record in Texas didn't support that suspicion.

The group includes three women, two African-Americans and one Hispanic.
Two of the nominees are district judges appointed to the bench by Bill Clinton. Three potential candidates who had already provoked criticism from Democrats were not chosen.

And the true-blue conservatives chosen by Bush are not party hacks or ideological hit men. They are top-flight lawyers. John G. Roberts Jr. is a former deputy solicitor general who has argued dozens of cases before the Supreme Court.

University of Utah professor Michael McConnell, previously a mainstay of the University of Chicago law faculty, is the nation's leading scholar on church-state jurisprudence. Although he takes issue with the "wall of separation" doctrine extolled by civil libertarians, he wins praise even from liberal sparring partners like Harvard's Laurence Tribe.

The only choice certain to provoke a fight is Terrence Boyle, a district judge in North Carolina who has drawn opposition from the state's Democratic senator, John Edwards. But other Democrats largely refrained from criticism of the selections, at least for the moment.

That's no guarantee that Bush will get the speedy votes he requested.
Speedy votes, after all, have only recently become a favorite cause of Senate Republicans, many of whom spent the last eight years blocking President Bill Clinton's judicial nominations. Democrats who bridled when their colleagues refused to confirm nominees for vacant seats on the bench are now in the unaccustomed position of insisting that the Senate carefully examine each selection.

Examine it should, but the Senate should also act promptly on the information it gathers.
Barring serious misjudgments, presidents of either party should be given deference in their choices for the judiciary--including those choices whose political and judicial philosophies conflict with those of the opposition party.

The Senate should demand solid qualifications, good legal minds and a respect for the law and the Constitution. But it shouldn't demand nominees who will vote a certain way on a particular issue. The Senate has a constitutional charge to advise and consent on judicial appointments. It should do so on these without undue delay.

The Honorable J. Dennis Hastert
Speaker
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. Speaker:

The Administration understands that, although conferees have not been named, congressional staff are discussing ways to reconcile the House and Senate versions of H.R. 333, the Bankruptcy Reform Act. As an agreement on this bill develops, your consideration of the Administration's views would be appreciated.

The Administration supports the overall goal of the bankruptcy reform legislation. The common sense reforms in these bills will curb many of the abuses of the current bankruptcy laws. However, the President's senior advisors object to the Senate-passed language regarding the homestead exemption and strongly urge the conferees to return to the bipartisan compromise language that was adopted by the last Congress.

The Administration looks forward to working with the conferees to secure passage of bankruptcy reform legislation and to resolving any other outstanding issues.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Mitchell E. Daniels, Jr.
Director

SEC. ___. DOWNPAYMENT ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE UNDER HOME PROGRAM.

(a) DOWNPAYMENT ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE.--The HOME Investment Partnerships Act is amended by adding the following new section after section 226:

"SEC. 227. DOWNPAYMENT ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE.

Beginning with amounts made available in fiscal year 2002 and continuing through fiscal year 2006, a participating jurisdiction shall use 11.5 percent of its total allocation amounts under section 217(b) for such 5-year period for downpayment assistance towards the purchase of single family housing by low-income families that are first-time homebuyers.".

(b) RELOCATION ASSISTANCE AND DOWNPAYMENT ASSISTANCE.--Such Act is amended by adding the following new section at the end:

"SEC. 291. RELOCATION ASSISTANCE AND DOWNPAYMENT ASSISTANCE.

The Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 shall not apply to downpayment assistance under this title.".

5/14/01
Section-by-Section

DOWNPAYMENT ASSISTANCE INITIATIVE UNDER HOME PROGRAM

Section ___ would support the proposal in HUD's FY 2002 Budget for the Downpayment Assistance Initiative/American Dream Downpayment Fund. The inability to afford a downpayment on a home is the biggest single obstacle to homeownership. This proposal would help low-income families to overcome this obstacle and achieve homeownership.

Subsection (a) would add a new section 227 to the HOME program for the Downpayment Assistance Initiative. Beginning in FY 2002 and continuing through FY 2006, a participating jurisdiction would be required to use 11.5 percent of its total allocation amounts under section 217(b) for such 5-year period for downpayment assistance towards the purchase of single family housing by low-income families that are first-time homebuyers. At the proposed funding level for FY 2002, this provision would provide about $200 million for downpayment assistance.

Subsection (b) would add a new section 291 to the HOME program regarding relocation assistance and downpayment assistance. The new section would provide that the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 would not apply to downpayment assistance under the HOME program. Eliminating the application of this Act when there is a willing buyer and a willing seller will broaden the housing choices for eligible families and reduce program costs.

SEC. ___. IMPROVING ACCESS INITIATIVE.

(a) GRANT AUTHORITY.

(1) IN GENERAL.--The Secretary is authorized to make a grant or grants for the purpose of assisting qualified organizations to make renovations or other physical modifications to eligible facilities to improve public access to such facilities for persons with disabilities. The Secretary is authorized to carry out the purpose of this section directly or indirectly as provided in paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) and in each case may utilize the expertise of other Federal agencies or intermediary organizations in the area of physical accessibility issues or other appropriate issues.

(2) DIRECT ASSISTANCE.--The Secretary may make competitive grants directly to qualified organizations to provide such assistance.

(3) INTERMEDIARY ORGANIZATIONS.--The Secretary may make a grant or grants on a competitive or noncompetitive basis to an intermediary organization or intermediary organizations to provide such assistance. An intermediary organization may provide such assistance through its local affiliates or through other organizations.

(4) FEDERAL AGENCIES.--The Secretary may enter into agreements or contracts with one or more such Federal agencies to have them make grants under this section on behalf of the Secretary.

(b) GRANT AGREEMENT.--A grant under this section shall be made only pursuant to a grant agreement between the Secretary and an intermediary or qualified organization. If the Secretary determines that an intermediary or qualified organization awarded a grant under this section has not substantially fulfilled its obligations under the grant agreement within a specified time period provided in such agreement after grant amounts are first made available to the intermediary or qualified organization, the Secretary may recapture and use any undisbursed amounts remaining from such grant for other grants under this section.

(c) ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW.--For purposes of environmental review, a grant under this section shall be treated as assistance for a special project that is subject to section 305(c) of the Multifamily Housing Property Disposition Reform Act of 1994, and shall be subject to the regulations issued by the Secretary to implement such section.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.--Of the total amount provided under the heading "Community Development Block Grants" in the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2002 and in such appropriations Act for fiscal years thereafter, there is authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter to carry out this section.

(e) DEFINITIONS.--For purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply--

(1) SECRETARY.--The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, except when the head of another Federal agency is making grants pursuant to subsection (a)(4).

(2) INTERMEDIARY ORGANIZATIONS.-- The term "intermediary organizations" means--

(A) national or regional organizations or consortia that serve directly or indirectly the interests of persons with disabilities; or

(B) any other organizations that the Secretary determines are appropriate to carry out this section; that operate within areas that the Secretary determines are appropriate to carry out this section.

(3) QUALIFIED ORGANIZATIONS.--The term "qualified organizations" means organizations that--

(A) are community-based (including religiously affiliated) or civic;

(B) primarily serve low- and moderate-income persons;

(C) are exempt from the provisions of title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 pursuant to section 307 of such Act; and

(D) have limited resources.

(4) ELIGIBLE FACILITIES.--The term "eligible facilities" means buildings or parts of buildings that are owned by qualified organizations and that are available for use by members of the public for or during social, community, or educational activities.

(5) LOW-AND MODERATE-INCOME PERSONS.--The term "low- and moderate-income persons" has the same meaning given that term by section 102(20) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

5/14/01

IMPROVING ACCESS INITIATIVE

Section ___ would support the proposal in HUD's FY 2002 Budget and in the Administration's New Freedom Initiative for the Improving Access Initiative. Many organizations that are exempt from the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) want their facilities to be accessible to persons with disabilities but have limited resources to achieve this objective. This proposal would provide assistance to those organizations to achieve this objective.

Subsection (a)(1) would authorize HUD to make a grant or grants for the purpose of assisting qualified organizations to make renovations or other physical modifications to eligible facilities to improve public access to such facilities for persons with disabilities. HUD would be authorized to carry out the purpose of this section directly or indirectly as provided in paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) and in each case would be permitted to utilize the expertise of other Federal agencies or intermediary organizations in the area of physical accessibility issues or other appropriate issues.

Paragraph (2) would authorize HUD to make competitive grants directly to qualified organizations to provide such assistance.

Paragraph (3) would authorize HUD to make a grant or grants on a competitive or noncompetitive basis to an intermediary organization or intermediary organizations to provide such assistance. An intermediary organization would be permitted to provide such assistance thorough its local affiliates or through other organizations.

Paragraph (4) would authorize HUD to enter into agreements or contracts with one or more such Federal agencies to have them make grants under this section on behalf of HUD.

The Department notes that qualified organizations receiving assistance under this section would be subject to section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which imposes accessibility and reasonable accommodation requirements to recipients of Federal financial assistance. The only exception would if HUD used the implementation method described in paragraph (3) and an intermediary organization would make the modifications to eligible facilities or contract with a third party to make such modifications. In that case, qualified organizations would be viewed as beneficiaries of assistance (not recipients of assistance) that are not subject to section 504 requirements.

Subsection (b) would require a grant under this section to be made only pursuant to a grant agreement between HUD and an intermediary or qualified organization. If HUD determines that a intermediary or qualified organization awarded a grant under this section has not substantially fulfilled its obligations under the grant agreement within a specified time period provided in such agreement after grant amounts are first made available to the intermediary or qualified organization, HUD would be permitted to recapture and use any undisbursed amounts remaining from such grant for other grants under this section.

Subsection (c) would provide for the State or local government assumption of Federal environmental review responsibilities by making grants subject to HUD's environmental assumption provisions and regulations for special projects.

Subsection (d) would provide that of the total amount provided under the CDBG heading in HUD's appropriations Act for FY 2002 and Fiscal Years thereafter, there is authorized to be appropriated $20 million for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter to carry out this section.

Subsection (e) would define the following terms: "Secretary", "intermediary organizations", "qualified organizations", "eligible facilities" and "low- and moderate-income persons".

AVAILABILITY OF FISCAL YEAR 2001 CDF FUNDS

SEC. _____. (a) Title II of the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001, is amended in the first paragraph under the heading "Community Development Fund"--

(1) by inserting before the first colon the following: ", to remain available until September 30, 2003"; and

(2) in the first proviso, by striking ", to remain available until September 30, 2003".

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be effective or shall be deemed to have taken effect, as appropriate, on the earlier of the date of enactment of this Act or September 30, 2001

5/14/01

AVAILABILITY OF FISCAL YEAR 2001 CDF FUNDS

Section _____ would correct what the Department believes to be a technical error in the Community Development Fund account, as enacted in title II of the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001. When this account was restructured in fiscal year 2001, the words "to remain available until September 30, 2003" were inserted so as to modify only those amounts made available for carrying out the community development block grant program under title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. This extended three year period of availability had historically been applied to all amounts made available under the relevant heading (the name of the heading changed in FY 2001, but the activities funded thereunder remained relatively constant), with the exception of those amounts made available for the cost of guaranteed loans under section 108 of such Act. Assuming that the Congress did not intend to appropriate what has historically been three year money for only one year, this amendment would extend the period of availability of the amounts at issue for an additional two years, and would apply (or would be deemed to apply, as appropriate) prior to the current October 1, 2001 expiration of such amounts.

0H.R. 1836 – Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001
(Rep. Thomas (R) California)

x7200

The Administration supports House passage of H.R. 1836 as a positive step on the way to passage of the President's tax relief plan. By reducing marginal tax rates, this bill would reduce the penalty on work, savings, and investment, begin the process of providing much needed immediate tax relief to the American people, and lay a foundation for further long-term economic growth.

par

No one should be forced to pay more than a third of what they earn in taxes. In fact, 77 percent of the tax relief associated with cutting the top rate in H.R. 1836 would go to small business owners and entrepreneurs – the engines of growth in our economy.

The Administration looks forward to working with Congress through the legislative process to achieve a result that best embodies the objectives and priorities of the President's plan.

Pay-As-You-Go Scoring

Any law that would reduce receipts is subject to the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act. Accordingly, H.R. 1836 or any substitute amendment in lieu thereof, that would also reduce revenues, will be subject to the pay-as-you-go requirement. The Administration will work with Congress to ensure that any unintended sequester of spending does not occur under current law or the enactment of any other proposals that meet the President's objectives to reduce the debt, fund priority initiatives, and grant tax relief to all income tax paying Americans.

This Statement of Administration Policy was developed by the Legislative Reference Division (Kho), in consultation with the Department of the Treasury (Chris Smith), WH Counsel (Kavanaugh), OVP (Conda), and CEA (Furchtgott-Roth).

The following did not respond to our request for views: WH/LA, NEC, EP, BRD, EIML, and HTF.

OMB/LA Clearance: COS (Silverberg for Bolton), WHLA (Howard, Hobbs), WHC (Kavanaugh), OVP (Addington), OVPLA (Dorn), NEC (Bonilla), CEA (Furchgott-Roth).r
Administration Position to Date

H.R. 1836 is identical to H.R. 3, the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Act of 2001, which was passed by the House on March 8, 2001. A Statement of Administration Policy on H.R. 3 was sent to the House on March 8, 2001, stating that the Administration supports the bill as a "very positive first step" to achieving the objectives of the President's tax relief plan.

Summary of H.R. 1836

H.R. 1836 would create a new initial income tax rate bracket and consolidate the five current income tax rates into four by 2006.

New Low Income Tax Rate Bracket. H.R. 1836 would create a new income tax bracket for a portion of taxable income that is currently taxed at 15 percent. The new initial bracket would cover taxable income up to $6,000 for single individuals, up to $10,000 for heads of households, and up to $12,000 for married couples filing joint returns. The lower rate for the new bracket would be phased in as follows:

5760 -- for taxable years beginning in calendar years 2001 and 2002, 12 percent; 5760 -- for taxable years beginning in calendar years 2003, 2004, and 2005, 11 percent; and 5760 -- for taxable years beginning in calendar year 2006, 10 percent.
x7200

The taxable income levels for the new low-rate bracket would be adjusted annually for inflation for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2006.

The current 15-percent income tax bracket would be adjusted to start at the end of the new low-rate income tax bracket. The 15-percent income tax bracket would end at the same level as under current law. (Treasury estimated revenue effect for FY 2001: -$4.9 billion; FY 2002: -$36.3 billion; FYs 2001-2005: -$172.9 billion; FYs 2001-2011: -$374.9 billion.)

Reduction of Other Tax Rates and Consolidation of Rate Brackets plain . Beginning in calendar year 2002, H.R. 1836 would begin to phase in reductions to the four highest income tax rates. H.R. 1836 would consolidate the number of rate brackets from five (15 percent, 28 percent, 31 percent, 36 percent, and 39.6 percent) to four by calendar year

H.R. 1836 would phase down the current income tax rates of 28 percent and 31 percent to 25 percent over five years. The taxable income level for the new 25-percent rate bracket would begin at the level at which the 28-percent rate bracket begins under the current law and end at the level at which the 31-percent rate bracket ends under the current law.

H.R. 1836 would phase down the current income tax rates of 36 percent and 39.6 percent to 33 percent over five years. The taxable income level for the new 33-percent rate bracket would begin at the level at which the 36-percent rate bracket begins under the current law.r
The table below shows the schedule for the income tax rate reductions.

| For taxable years beginning during calendar year: 722 brdrs | The corresponding percentages would be substituted for the following percentages: | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 39.6% | | | |
| | 3 8 % | | | |
| 2002 | 27% | 30% | 35% | 38% |
| 2003 | 27% | 29% | 35% | 37% |
| 2004 | 26% | 28% | 34% | 36% |
| 2005 | 26% | 27% | 34% | 35% |
| rdrs2006 and later | 25% | 25% | 33% | 33% |

(Treasury estimated revenue effect for FY2002: -$11.7 billion; FYs 2002-2006: -$165.1 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$499.8 billion.)

Other Provisions of H.R. 1836. The bill would repeal the current-law provisions that offset the refundable child credit (for families with three or more children) and the earned income credit by the amount of the alternative minimum tax (AMT) for taxpayers subject to the AMT. (Treasury estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$45 million; FYs 2002-2006: -$1.7 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$7.3 billion.)

The bill would also specify that transfers of income taxes to any of the trust funds under the Social Security Act would continue as under current law. This provision of the bill would ensure that the long-term financial condition of the Social Security and Medicare trust funds would not be affected by enactment of the bill.

H.R. 1836 would require the Treasury to implement regulations revising wage withholding tables to reflect the rate reduction for calendar year 2001 such that the tables could be applied to amounts paid after the 60th day following enactment of this bill.
Pay-As-You-Go Scoring

As noted above, H.R. 1836 is identical to H.R. 3. According to BASD (Barth), H.R. 3 could affect receipts; therefore, it would be subject to the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1990. The Treasury Department estimates that H.R. 3 would have a net budget cost of $4.9 billion in FY 2001, $48.0 billion in FY 2002, $339.8 billion over six years, FY 2001-2006, and $881.9 billion over eleven years, FY 2001-2011.r

Reduction of Other Tax Rates and Consolidation of Rate Brackets. Beginning in calendar year 2002, H.R. 1836 would begin to phase in reductions to the four highest income tax rates. H.R. 1836 would consolidate the number of rate brackets from five (15 percent, 28 percent, 31 percent, 36 percent, and 39.6 percent) to four by calendar year 2006.

H.R. 1836 would phase down the current income tax rates of 28 percent and 31 percent to 25 percent over five years. The taxable income level for the new 25-percent rate bracket would begin at the level at which the 28-percent rate bracket begins under the current law and end at the level at which the 31-percent rate bracket ends under the current law.

H.R. 1836 would phase down the current income tax rates of 36 percent and 39.6 percent to 33 percent over five years. The taxable income level for the new 33-percent rate bracket would begin at the level at which the 36-percent rate bracket begins under the current law.

The table below shows the schedule for the income tax rate reductions.

| For taxable years beginning during calendar year: | The corresponding percentages would be substituted for the following percentages: | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 28% | 31% | 36% | 39.6% |
| 2002 | 27% | 30% | 35% | 38% |
| 2003 | 27% | 29% | 35% | 37% |
| 2004 | 26% | 28% | 34% | 36% |
| 2005 | 26% | 27% | 34% | 35% |
| 2006 and later | 25% | 25% | 33% | 33% |

(Treasury estimated revenue effect for FY2002: -$11.7 billion; FYs 2002-2006: -$165.1 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$499.8 billion.)

Other Provisions of H.R. 1836. The bill would repeal the current-law provisions that offset the refundable child credit (for families with three or more children) and the earned income credit by the amount of the alternative minimum tax (AMT) for taxpayers subject to the AMT. (Treasury estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$45 million; FYs 2002-2006: -$1.7 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$7.3 billion.)

The bill would also specify that transfers of income taxes to any of the trust funds under the Social Security Act would continue as under current law. This provision of the bill would ensure that the long-term financial condition of the Social Security and Medicare trust funds would not be affected by enactment of the bill.

H.R. 1836 would require the Treasury to implement regulations revising wage withholding tables to reflect the rate reduction for calendar year 2001 such that the tables could be applied to amounts paid after the 60th day following enactment of this bill.

Pay-As-You-Go Scoring

As noted above, H.R. 1836 is identical to H.R. 3. According to BASD (Barth), H.R. 3 could affect receipts; therefore, it would be subject to the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1990. The Treasury Department estimates that H.R. 3 would have a net budget cost of $4.9 billion in FY 2001, $48.0 billion in FY 2002, $339.8 billion over six years, FY 2001-2006, and $881.9 billion over eleven years, FY 2001-2011.

I think we should decide as a whole whether or not to provide anything beyond the press release -- it might look odd if we provide some but not others. I vote against providing resumes.

If you are interested in providing your resume/bio to Douglas McCollam please email this to me by 12:00 noon on Monday.

I'll also send to him a copy of the press release(s) issued announcing the hiring of counsel staff.

Thanks!

Subject: Additional research memos

The Judge and Tim have requested three additional long-form memoranda of the kind we all prepared a few weeks back. They have asked me and Brett to search for volunteers to do another round. Anyone not overwhelmed in the next few weeks and willing to take this on?

We're having a meeting at 6:30 in Z's office in the East Wing to discuss what's been happening so far in the 2-Dem states. If you are responsible for any such states and have a few minutes to fill the group in, please come by.

Pool report #2 _ May 21, 2001

Bush?s return to Washington from Yale University.

Not much to report, but you might want critique of Bush's speech from Lanny Davis at bottom.

The motorcade from Yale to the New Haven airport was uneventful, with the only color coming from a couple of protesters. As the motorcade passed through a residential street near the airport, a man held a sign saying, ``Hiel (sic) to the Thief.??? A woman next to him was yelling. I could not make out what she was saying, but it obviously wasn't the ``Bush-Cheney'' chant.

At the airport, Bush and Gov. John Rowland worked a short rope line for a couple of minutes before boarding Marine One for the trip to the Hartford airport. Rowland helped out by snapping a couple of photographs of Bush and the well-wishers, most of whom where military personnel.

The guests on Air Force One included former Clinton aide Lanny Davis and his wife and infant child.

Davis, who graduated from Yale a year ahead of Bush and was also a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, Bush's frat, said he was hitching a ride back to Washington.

``He's an old friend of mine from Yale, and I decided to do him honors,'' Davis said. He said Bush's speech was ``great. It was the right tone. It never surprises me that he can reach out to people even who disagree with him.''

AF 1 landed at Dulles at about 2:26 p.m., and Bush returned to the White House by helicopter.
